NEW LOOK FOR COUNTY LIBRARY — The Marin County Library, long crowded into small space in the old county office building in San Rafael, will

Marin County Finally Gets Library That's Real Library

By ALTON S. BOCK

When the new Marin County Library opens in the Civic Center Monday, new surroundings will be only one of many changes.
Improved services to more people will be obvious, according to librarian Virginia Keating.
"This is the first time we've been able to put all books together in the proper collections," Mrs. Keating said. "Everything will be more accessible and will be out where people can see what we have."
Patrons will also be able to sit down and read in the library. This is a service most libraries are assumed to provide, but it was not possible in the old, overcrowded library on Grand Avenue in San Rafael.

Not only does the new library have nearly 30 large, round, walnut tables, but many of them are placed so readers have a view of the Marin hills from the fourth-level windows of the library.
Floor space in the new library will be more than four times that of the old one on Grand Avenue; 20,000 square feet compared to 4,800 square feet.
"At our old building," Mrs. Keating said, "we had to keep reference books in four separate places. Many of our other non-circulating books were stored where they could hardly be found. Now we have room to display them as well as current magazines and newspapers."

In addition to the main room under the Civic Center dome, the library has a separate "California room" for material on the state and county.
"All of the books and papers of the county's history will be kept there," said Mrs. Keating. "The collection includes the original plans for the Civic Center."
Recently donated to the Marin collection were Civic Center papers of the late county auditor, Leon A. De Lisle. He gave the library his collection two days before his death on Dec. 13.
The new library will offer the public extra hours, too. Beginning Jan. 14, the library

Mill Valley Eyes Cost Of Library

The Mill Valley City Council spent this morning gloomily considering three possible methods of raising an estimated $360,000 to $400,000 for a new library.
Council members, meeting with the library board, heard an outline by B. W. Burkhardt, a municipal financing consultant, of a "lease-back" method which would not require a vote of the people, but which would cost more in interest and other expenses.
Burkhardt, representing J. B. Hanauer and Co., said the lease-back method is coming into wide use in California for financing many kinds of public buildings.
The system involves formation of a non-profit corporation to which the city would lease the library property, and which in turn would issue bonds, construct the library and lease it back to the city. Ownership would revert to the city and the corporation would be dissolved when the annual lease payments had redeemed all the bonds.
Burkhardt said his firm could conduct a feasibility study to determine whether Mill Valley's city finances could meet the lease payments.

Rally 'Round Juanita's

If Juanita's Galley is padlocked for non-payment of taxes, it won't be the fault of owner Juanita Musson's friends in the entertainment world.
The Internal Revenue Service, ready with a writ to close the Galley aboard the old ferry boat Charles Van Damme in Sausalito, last week gave Mrs. Musson a week's grace to raise $4,497 she had failed to pay in employees' withholding taxes.
Entertainers rallied to Juanita's support for a fund-raising rally Wednesday night. Still short of the necessary funds, they staged a second rally Thursday night, and a third last night. And they promised to keep it going through the weekend, with "a pretty continuous jam session" interspersed with various acts by volunteer television, radio and night club personalities.
Today, however, the fund was still more than $1,000 short of its goal.

Rusk Sees Quick Congo Settlement

JFK, Secretary In Conference At Palm Beach

PALM BEACH (UPI) — Secretary of State Dean Rusk said after meeting with President John F. Kennedy here today that there is "a real chance" for settlement of the Congo-Katanga dispute.

But the cabinet officer told newsmen that "of course it's up to Mr. Tshombe." He referred to Moise Tshombe, the leader of secessionist Katanga province.

Rusk said that he and Thomas K. Finletter, U. S. representative to the NATO council, discussed a long list of problems with the president which affect the Western alliance.

One of the foremost issues was French President Charles de Gaulle's message to Kennedy within the last several days insisting upon nuclear independence for France, but neither opening nor closing the door to the U. S. offer of polaris missiles.

Talking with reporters at the West Palm Beach Airport before flying to Miami, where he is spending the weekend, there was a possibility of assigning additional U. S. nuclear forces to NATO until further progress could be made in establishing a multi-nation nuclear setup.

The secretary said the American forces could be assigned under existing arrangements rather than those which were worked out by Kennedy and British Prime Minister Harold Macmillan at Nassau last month.

The secretary said with respect to the Congo, "We feel it is very important that the leaders of the Congo now move quickly to a peaceful settlement."

Katangese Drive On Elisabethville

Bunche Gives Green Light To U.N. Troops

ELISABETHVILLE, Katanga, The Congo (UPI) — Katanga Interior Minister Godefroid Munongo has reformed the battered Katangese gendarmerie and is leading a march of 1,000 men on Elisabethville from the Northern Rhodesian border, the United Nations said today.

The development threatened to explode a new round of fighting in the mineral rich province. It came as U.N. Undersecretary Ralph Bunche arrived in Leopoldville and gave the green light for further military operations against Katanga President Moise Tshombe.

Bunche pinpointed three more main military objectives including Tshombe's stronghold at Kolwezi and Sakania. The stronghold is located on the border of Northern Rhodesia, 100 miles southeast of Elisabethville, from which the Katangese were reported moving with at least six armored vehicles.

It appeared obvious Bunche was hoping to withhold these major U.N. strikes until Secretary General Thant's two-week ultimatum to Tshombe to talk peace or face renewed warfare expires Jan. 14. The new Katangese offensive could change all that, however.

Tshombe has shown no signs of talking peace at the moment.

U.N. reconnaissance aircraft flying over the Sakania area today reported that Munongo has reformed stragglers from the Katangese Gendarmerie who were driven out of Elisabethville in a U.N. Christmas offensive and was leading them into battle.

Army Plans To Revamp Guard Units

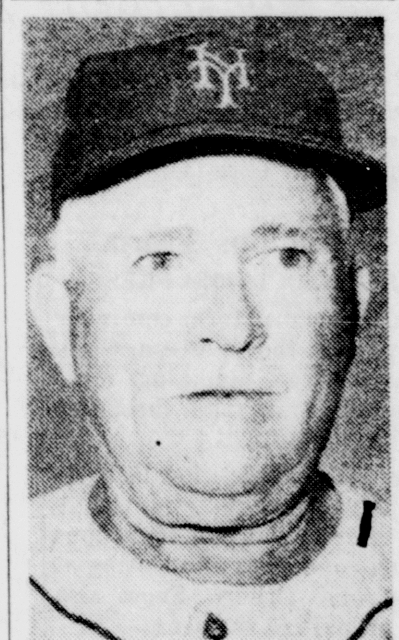

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army announced today a plan to reorganize National Guard divisions and brigades in the same way the regular Army is being revamped, as soon as the states and the Pentagon reach agreement on a general re-vamping of the guard.

The Army made its announcement as a committee of governors met here to negotiate on concessions from the Army in its plan to cut back and reshape the National Guard structure.

The seven-member committee of governors held a preliminary meeting of its own and then began discussions with Secretary of the Army Cyrus Vance.

One of the objections raised by the states to the Pentagon's guard reorganization program has been that their guard units might have to go through two revamping procedures: First the proposed elimination of four guard divisions and formation of eight brigades; then at some future time, reshape the structure of the divisions to conform with the regular Army's ROAD (Reorganization Objective Army Division) program.

The Army's move today thus appeared designed to offer the

Peru Junta Thwarts Revolt Plot

LIMA, Peru (UPI) — The ruling military junta proclaimed a national state of siege today to thwart a revolt plot it said was hatched in Moscow and Havana. Police flying-squads arrested scores of known Communists in pre-dawn raids.

Estimates ranged from 50 to 300 on the number of known or suspected Communists arrested. The state of siege means constitutional guarantees for citizens have been lifted until further notice. The government said the nation was calm.

The state of siege was announced by the government at 3 a.m. today. Simultaneously the government cut off all inter-city telephone service in the republic. Provincial police were placed under the command of military zone commanders.

Throughout the nation police burst into the residences of Communists, dragged them from bed, and took them off to detention centers. In Lima alone, 40 to 60 Army trucks were used to shuttle prisoners in the early morning round-up.
In the nearby port of El Callao, infantry troops dislodged 2,000 striking workers from two shoe-manufacturing factories they had taken over. One worker was killed and two others were wounded in exchanging fire with the troops, police said.

New San Rafael Bank Is Open For Business

San Rafael's new independent Redwood National Bank opened its doors at Fourth and E streets today at 11 a.m. with the symbolic splitting of a redwood by its president, Byron W. Leydecker.

Both "open house" and business were order of the day.
Early comers were given free redwood seedlings about a foot high with soil encasing roots for quick growth to expected heights of from eight to 10 feet within five years. In naming the bank its organizers chose the redwood as a symbol of strength.

Bank officials drew the line at giving free samples of money but they had an ingenious variant: "check" coupons clipped from the Independent-Journal were each good for $2 if used in opening checking or savings accounts.

"Instead of giving the usual souvenir junk," explained Leydecker, "we felt we should come up with something of real meaning to our friends, ourselves and our more than 1,000 local stockholders."

Special attention was called to the comfortable but informal chairs and office arrangements within the bank, formerly headquarters of Pacific Gas and Electric Co.

Arrangements ruled out any form of barriers between bank officials and the public. Teller's counters are in staggered order with short partitions giving additional privacy to customers.

Full banking services will be provided, including 160 safe deposit boxes. Night depository facilities face on Fourth Street. Parking is provided at the rear of the building and officers said they feel the location at the edge of the main business

Donohue Retires As Tax Collector

M. F. Donohue spent his last full day yesterday on the job after serving 32 years as tax collector of Marin County.

The "dean" of county officials—he has served longer than any other elected officer presently with the county—will retire at noon Monday and turn his office over to Tax Collector-elect Stanley J. Fonz. County supervisors and department heads sprang a surprise luncheon for the retiring official yesterday noon.

About 20 elected officials and department heads gathered at Nero's Dining Room at Nave Lanes in Ignacio to honor Donohue and reminisce with him about his courthouse career.

Speakers were Judge Thomas F. Keating, Judge Harold J. Haley, and Supervisor William D. Fusselman. Master of ceremonies was Assessor Bert W. Broemmell.

Donohue was a railroad man in Marin for 25 years before he ran for tax collector in 1930. "I won by 412 votes over John Saunders, who had been tax collector for 20 years," Donohue said. "He was also a railroad man."

Born at Tocaloma, Donohue was one of 11 children of the foreman for the old North Shore Railway. He worked for the railroad, which later became part of the Northwestern Pacific, as a brakeman between Sausalito and Cazadero in Sonoma County.

"Working on the railroad was more hazardous than working as tax collector," said Donohue wryly. "but I can't say I liked it better. I worked later as a conductor for the Northwestern Pacific from Sausalito to Willits, and I lived in Sausalito, Tiburon and San Rafael.

"Conditions have changed a lot, not only with the railroad but in the tax collector's office. When I came into office, we collected $900,000 a year in taxes. Now we collect more than 25 million dollars. It's also more complex. There are now hundreds of special districts.

"But we should get up and ride with these changes."

County Auditor Michael Michell credits Donohue with much of the success in the county's conversion to use of data processing machines. "If it hadn't been for Frank's progressive attitude, we wouldn't be utilizing data processing as we are now," Michell said. "He is also one of the most hard-working department heads in the county. He has even hesitated to take a normal vacation each year."

Assessor Bert W. Broemmell, whose office works closely with the tax collector's, said, "When I became assessor in 1959, I found it most gratifying to find so much cooperation from Mr. Donohue in our efforts to solve mutual problems. He has been an outstanding public servant."

Donohue was elected to his eight four-year terms without opposition. "I appreciated the confidence of the people," he said, "and I hope the service has been good."

He lives at 1144 East Court Street in Novato with his wife, Jane, to whom he has been married 32 years. His son, Donald Donohue, and three granddaughters also live in Novato.

Donohue said he wants "only a good rest now," but he and his wife may travel later.

"Me might like to travel by train," he added.

BRITAIN WORRIED BY SLOW ECONOMY

By SAM DAWSON

NEW YORK (AP) — Like the United States, Britain is worried about the slow growth of her economy as measured in terms of employment and as compared with the spectacular rise in the Continental European nations.

So now Britain is trying easier money.

It has brought its official bank lending rate down to 4 per cent, as against a post-war high of 7 per cent in mid 1961.

The latest cut means that British banks can borrow from the Bank of England at a lower rate. They thus can get more money to lend to industry if it wishes to expand its activities or to consumers who want to purchase goods at lower interest charges.

The U.S. discount rate is 3 per cent—meaning that money is still cheaper here than in Britain.

The United Kingdom also is using another pump-priming technique that the American administration is advocating. The United States is debating cutting income taxes. The London government, which puts heavier emphasis on sales taxes, has cut this levy on a number of consumer items such as cars, television sets, radios, cosmetics.

Until recently those taxes had been kept high to discourage consumer purchasing while the British government was fighting to strengthen the pound sterling in world money markets.

At the moment the pound looks much healthier—as does the dollar — and both nations now feel they can stimulate domestic business without danger of another run on their gold and dollar, or gold and pound reserves.

The Macmillan government also is hard pressed at the moment and its opposition will charge that the rate cut is primarily a move to win back favor with the electorate.

Britain has reported its gold and hard currency reserves are a bit below a year ago.

But this is more than accounted for by its recent payment of debts to the United States, Canada and the International Monetary fund.

London now feels free to try to spur a sluggish economy by making money easier. One possible effect in the United States will be that it will be just that less attractive for investors with idle dollars to take them to London in search of higher returns than obtainable here.

Any curb on such outflow would help the American balance of payments situation.

City Has 23,000 More Telephones Than People

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Beverly Hills has about 23,000 more telephones than it has people, according to an international survey published yesterday by the American Telephone and Telegraph Co.

The report termed this fact "an outstanding ratio" of people to telephones.

San Francisco ranked fourth in the nation in the ratio of phones to population in cities over 50,000. The city has 70.4 phones for every 100 persons. Palo Alto was ninth with a 63.9 ratio and the greater East Bay, including Oakland, Alameda, Berkeley and San Leandro has a 59 ratio.

Other Northern California communities had these ratios: Sunnyvale, 56.7; San Mateo, 50.3; San Jose, 45.2; Richmond, 41.3, and Hayward, 36.3.

There was no report for Marin County.

Suit Filed In Hospital Death

A quarter-million dollar damage suit was filed yesterday in Marin Superior Court for the late John T. Urban Jr. of Woodacre, who died one year ago today after an operation at Ross General Hospital.

Urban's widow, June Elizabeth Urban, and her two children, Carolyn June, 12, and John Edward, 8, filed the suit against the hospital, several doctors, and John Does.

The Urbans charge negligent and careless diagnoses and surgical procedures and that defective suture material was used in the operation.

Marin City Boy Picked Up In Theft

A 12-year-old Marin City boy was taken to juvenile hall Wednesday after he was reported to have taken $32 from the cash register at Hickman's Chevron Service, 400 Miller Avenue, Mill Valley.

Lloyd Merritt, station attendant, told Mill Valley police he caught the boy stealing the money at 5:30 p.m. The boy, police said, admitted having taken $30 out of the same register about a week ago.

Over Half Palsy Funds For School

More than half of the $5,500 annual budget of United Cerebral Palsy of Marin, or $2,900, will support educational work of the Marindale School, according to Kenneth Simmons of Terra Linda, treasurer of the group.

Simmons said that $1,475 will be devoted to therapy and camping experience of afflicted children unable to share in ordinary programs.

Plans are to devote the rest of the budget to starting a program of 1,000 scholarships to help train therapists and to assist the handicapped in achieving higher education. This will be administered through San Francisco State College.

Simmons noted that operating expenses total only $1,185, less than a quarter of the program budget. The Marin volunteer organization retains 75 per cent of contributions, the rest going to the national program.

Officer Faces Police Charges

A San Francisco police officer, accused last month of waving a revolver in a threatening manner in Mill Valley, now faces departmental charges by the San Francisco Police Commission.

The Marin County Charge was dropped last month against Hugh Patrick Boyd, 46, of 105 Montford Avenue. However, Deputy Police Chief Al Neider of San Francisco said the police commission will consider these two charges: Leaving his home without permission while on disability leave, and the gun waving.

Conviction can bring dismissal, suspension or fine. Boyd has six days in which to answer the accusation.

THE TWO TEAMS OF REDWOOD NATIONAL BANK

[First Team]

The first is Redwood management. They're among the youngest of any national bank in the country. The New Frontier of banking, you might say. Each has already made his mark within banking circles. Each vigorously believes that the art of banking depends upon the warmth of relationships between people. And each is interested in providing this community with a bank that really cares about personal service; one that will thrive and grow on that care and on primarily that. It's what a famous banker used to call, "taking care of the little guy."

[Second Team]

The second team is the Board of Directors. Some of the most respected active leaders in this community. They know the county; they've seen it grow; they know its potential. They are interested in building a bank with its roots here. A bank that can help Marin meet its most promising times.

Together, Redwood's two teams plan to make banking a lively, and for once, a pleasant experience. And they're going to do it here. The home office is here. The Board is here. The management is here. All of us live here and will succeed here.

Redwood is dedicated to this community and its growth. Redwood will thrive by serving, and will become as strong as its namesake. With roots deep in this soil.

Wedding Reception Rough In Marin City

The wedding reception got a bit rough at a Marin City home last night, sending a 10-year-old boy to a hospital with a half-inch cut in his arm.

It seems, according to sheriff's officers, that Willie Dean, 37, and his bride, Marie Hawkins Dean, were celebrating their nuptials at 269 Drake Avenue.

About 11:30 p.m., the new Mrs. Dean told Deputy Sheriff John O. Hoff, she heard someone arguing and went to see what it was about. Her husband of 10 hours told her it was none of her business, punched her in the face, then pulled a pocket knife, she said.

Charles Henry, Mrs. Dean's son by a former marriage, rushed to protect his mother. The knife cut a half-inch gash in his left arm, which required three stitches to close at Marin General Hospital.

Mrs. Dean said she wouldn't sign a complaint. The honeymoon wasn't over.

fighters flew deep into Rhodesian territory today in the same area. It ordered its own jet air force to patrol the border and halt further incursions.

The U.N. spotter craft said the Katangese were moving from Sakania and Ushoshi, about 12 miles away, where the Katangese still hold immigration and customs posts. The road is the only route the civilian population can move food, medical supplies and gasoline into Katanga from the south.

The U.N. command said Munongo's forces controlled part of the road and a rail line which runs parallel for 16 miles between Elisabethville and the Northern Rhodesian border.

The central government, meanwhile, flew in officials to Elisabethville to assume control over the administration in a further step to incorporate secessionist Katanga back into the Congo government.

A Miami man, realizing many Americans have such a desire, has copyrighted an idea for a "frustration room." In it, the jangle-nerved gentry can heave dishes, lamps, light bulbs, small furniture pieces with bang-up abandon.

A Moratorium On All Overdue Books

If you have a county library book that is overdue, you have all next week to return it.

Marin County Librarian Virginia Keating said yesterday the library is declaring a moratorium on all overdue books during its first week of operation at the Civic Center.

No library fines will be assessed, because the library was closed for two weeks while moving to the Civic Center. Normal fines on overdue books are five cents a day for adults and two cents a day for children.

Check Ring Suspects Are Nabbed By Patrol

An alert California Highway Patrol officer in Marin yesterday spotted three suspects in a Bay Area fraudulent check ring and arrested them for San Bruno police.

CHP Officer Ray V. Kirner spotted a car fitting a description of one wanted by San Bruno at 11:35 a.m. on Highway 101 in Terra Linda. He arrested Joe Barnes Hamner, 20, of Lakeport; Kimball Elliott Dodge, 20, of Upper Lake, Lake County, and William O. Henrickson, 18, San Francisco. The three are now held without bail in San Bruno jail with a fourth suspect, Harold L. Cochran, 20, Lakeport. They will be arraigned Monday on a charge of conspiracy to pass fraudulent checks.

San Bruno police said Cochran went into the San Bruno branch of the Bank of America with a $190 personal check drawn against Henrickson's mother yesterday morning. Bank officials recognized the name as one involved in other check cases and held the youth until police arrived. Meanwhile, the other three drove away, but not before bank employees got a description of the car.

Police said the four are believed to have cashed $590 worth of bad checks in San Francisco and the Peninsula area.

Freedom Brief For Ex-Hub Man

Freedom was brief today for Brett Barrett, a former San Anselmo resident.

Barrett was released from a three-month term in San Francisco County Jail to be promptly taken in tow by Asst. Chief Sam N. Serio of San Anselmo police, who escorted him to Marin County Jail, there to await hearing on a charge of passing fraudulent checks in San Anselmo.

Several of Barrett's checks "bounced" about a year ago, according to Serio. He vanished from San Anselmo, but was located later in San Francisco. Police there arrested him on a Marin warrant, only to find in his possession pawn tickets which led to his conviction on a burglary charge.

When Marin gets through with Barrett, he still may not be free. The State of Indiana has a fugitive warrant for him.

states the opportunity to reform the divisions concurrently with the general guard reorganization program.

The new structural organization will be applied not only to the regular Army, but to the reserves and the National Guard as well.

The Army formed two new divisions—the 1st Armored at Ft. Hood, Tex., and the 5th Infantry at Ft. Carson, Colo.—about a year ago. These divisions used the new three-brigade structure as a test of the ROAD program.

Vance said today that those divisions have demonstrated the soundness of the new structure program and that all divisions would be reorganized. Much of this will be accomplished this year and all regular Army divisions will be reorganized by late 1964, the announcement said.

Kettle Lid Is A Fire Alarm

EAST ST. LOUIS, Ill. (UPI)—Firemen used a durable kettle lid and metal ladle as a temporary substitute for the automatic alarm system.

An electrical malfunction knocked out the system. While trouble, assistant fire chief Charles Cadell borrowed the utensils from the department's kitchen.

When the dispatcher received a call reporting a fire, he turned on the intercom system and rapped the lid sharply with the ladle.

It worked. The banging attracted the attention of all stations.

All-Day Larkspur Parking Protested

Vice President Kenneth Anderson of the Larkspur Chamber of Commerce has been delegated by fellow directors to confer with City Mgr. Ronald E. Piper over cars that are parked all day in a city-leased lot on Magnolia Avenue.

YMCA Bid For Civic Center Site

The Marin County Civic Center committee yesterday heard a request from the Marin Young Men's Christian Assn. that a youth center be built on the Civic Center-County Fairgrounds site.

The committee held the suggestion for study.

Attorney Leland H. Jordan, member of the YMCA executive board, presented the request. A similar request was made to the board of supervisors several months ago.

The committee discussed the proposed second-phase Civic Center construction and agreed to prepare for the board of supervisors information on predicted needs of county departments and possible schedules for future construction.

"We will gather information and make suggestions within 30 days," said County Administrator Alan Bruce.

The committee includes several department heads and architect Aaron Green. Supervisor George H. Ludy also attended yesterday's meeting in the county administrator's office.

siege said "a vast subversive plan of agitation and violence, planned by agents of Moscow and Havana has been unleashed."

The plot was discovered, the communists said, when government counter-subversive electronics technicians detected signals from a clandestine micro-wave station in the Andes, near the Bolivian border.

The station was to relay orders from abroad to Communist actionists in a nation-wide revolt, the communists said.

The plot was to be carried out in stages, according to the communists. It said these were:

General strikes followed by sabotage in American-owned properties (this phase had apparently already begun).

Assassination of "armed forces leaders and certain so-called reactionaries."

Guerilla action to cut government communications.

Urban terrorism and, finally, a general uprising.

area gives superior accessibility.

Leydecker said the bank offers "two teams", including a seasoned group of directors supported by management personnel comprising "probably the youngest such group in any national bank in the country."

Himself only 35, Leydecker is backed by Dale Walter, 28, as senior vice president.

"We feel," said Leydecker, "that there is a strong need in this county for an independent national bank directed by a broad and representative cross-section of community and business leaders."

"Our stockholders proved this by oversubscribing the initial capitalization by some $400,000. We believe people want the personal and immediate kind of attention they can get only from an institution such as ours, only locally owned and managed national bank in Marin."

Capitalization of the bank is $1,600,000. Its directors are Abe Blumenfeld, Walter R. Castro, Douglas M. Christensen, Roger Darrow, Sherman Leland Jr., Leydecker, Jordan L. Martelli, John C. Siemens, and Walter.

Today's combined social and business session was to continue to 5 p.m. but daily week-day hours from Monday will be 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. except Fridays, when the bank will remain open until 6 p.m.

Norell's Show Rosy With Tinted Makeup

By GAY PAULEY

NEW YORK (UPI) — Everything's coming up roses, as designer Norman Norell sees fashion for spring.

The award-winning designer set off more hubbub with the rose-tinted makeup his mannequins wore at the opening of his spring collection on last night than he did with any changes in hemline or silhouette of the clothes themselves.

ALL THE MODELS were in the pink—pink rouge, applied heavily on the eyelids, then shaded up and out around the whole eye and upper cheekbone area to the hairline at the temple. To go with the rouged look—sleek, boyish hairdos, almost shingled at the back, and without a trace of curl.

A spokesman for Norell, who has won just about every design award there is kicking around in the fashion industry, said that the whole cosmetics scheme was a matter of experiment in the dressing room.

Norell explained that he got the idea for the bright pink makeup from actors in the Chinese theater.

CERTAINLY OTHER Norell innovations have caught on—from the heavily shadowed eye makeup his mannequins wore a couple of years ago to the culotte skirt he introduced in 1960.

Norell brought the culotte back for spring '63 with the comment—"I was a fool to stop it." But the new culottes are cut with more width, more ease, and look more like skirts.

The culottes showed in handsome daytime silks, sleeveless with middy collars, and in evening hostess gowns sweeping the floor. "There are many at-home clothes in the collection," the designer explained, (because) "with the new tax situation we feel there will be more entertaining at home."

Norell produced no changes in hemlines for day—they remained 19 inches from the floor on the models, or just covering the kneecap. Neither was there a major change in silhouette, rather a re-emphasis on what he called the "straight but never tight" shape.

'Beanstalk' Marionette Shows Is Set

"Fe-Fie-Fo-Fum! I smell the blood of an Englishman! Be he alive, or be he dead, I'll grind his bones to make my bread." So roars the giant in "Jack and the Beanstalk," to be given Jan. 12 at 10:30 a.m. and 2 p.m. at the San Rafael High School Auditorium.

The play is the second of the winter series of professional plays for children sponsored by the Junior Theatre of Marin, and will be given by the Lesselli Marionettes.

Single tickets, while they last, may be purchased at the door. Season ticket holders will be given preference, says Mrs. Wallace Painter, county chairman.

The Lessellis, who have been performing puppet shows over the country for 27 years, take a different folk tale with them on tour each year. Since their home is in San Rafael, they begin their season for the children of Marin County.

This year, Leslie and Eleanor Lesselli chose "Jack and the Beanstalk" because of the universal appeal of this timeless tale.

AN APRIL BRIDE

Grandest Westminster Rites Set For Alexandra's Wedding

LONDON (UPI) — The grandest Westminster Abbey wedding since that of Queen Elizabeth II and Prince Philip 15 years ago is predicted for Princess Alexandra and her handsome Highland fiance, Angus Ogilvy.

April is the month set for the marriage of the tall and blonde Alexandra, 26, and the 34-year-old Ogilvy, a descendant of Scottish lairds but himself a commoner.

IN REGAL SPLENDOR, if not in romantic interest, it seems certain that the Abbey wedding for Alexandra will outdo that of Princess Margaret and Antony Armstrong-Jones in May, 1960.

Margaret's unhappy love affair with Peter Townsend, the RAF Group Captain, made her new found happiness more of a heart's and flowers event. But Princess Alexandra is universally popular in a way Princess Margaret never has been and Britons will give her a joyful sendoff into matrimony.

Alexandra's charm, for the man and woman in the street, has been her "regular girl" appeal. Margaret, despite her occasional night life fame in her younger days, always has been more aloof.

Alexandra's popularity also extends to the commonwealth and other countries she has toured and won with her outgoing personality.

AFTER A VISIT to Australia she was known thereafter to the Aussies as "The Dinkum Princess." At home, she has been called "the blue jeans princess" to illustrate her basic touch and such habits as buying her clothes off the rack in London's shops.

Ogilvy has not been so much in the public eye but his family is descended from Mary Queen of Scots. He is dark and goodlooking, has been to the "right" schools, has been the friend and companion to Alexandra for eight years, and has quickly won approval from the British press and public.

IT IS LIKELY this wedding will bring together one of the greatest gatherings of royalty in many years. Queen Ingrid of Denmark was one of the few monarchs to attend Princess Margaret's wedding. But it is expected almost every European king and queen will be in the Abbey for Alexandra's nuptials. There will be scores of princes and princesses. Far East royalty is expected to be represented at least by the King and Queen of Thailand, whom Alexandra has visited in their homeland and with whom she has become good friends.

ALEXANDRA'S bridesmaids will probably include royal princesses.

Through her mother, Princess Marina, and her late father, the Duke of Kent, Alexandra is related to practically every royal house.

If only her royal relatives turned up for the wedding the Abbey would be filled to its old rafters with blue blood.

The wedding will be the third in a row for a member of the British royal family to a commoner. After Margaret married her photographer, Armstrong-Jones, Alexandra's brother, the present Duke of Kent, was wed to Katherine Worsley, daughter of a Yorkshire land-owner.

'Smoke, But No Fire' In Possible Pro Grid Scandal

HOLLYWOOD BEACH, Fla. (UPI)—Some smoke but no fire. By OSCAR FRALEY

That was the summation by National Football League Commissioner Pete Rozelle today on the pro circuit's investigation into reports of a possible scandal involving some NFL teams during the last two years.

Rozelle admitted that some members of the Chicago Bears and players of "three or four other" league teams have "associated with undesirable types" but added an investigation by the league's staff of 16 former FBI agents has turned up nothing of "a criminal nature."

"We haven't found any fire," Rozelle said, "but anytime we see any smoke we look fast. We have proved nothing except questionable association by some players . . . as of right now we have not been able to find anything of a criminal nature."

Earl Leggett, Bears tackle and offensive captain, threw some light on the investigation when he revealed on a television show in Jackson, Miss., last night that Tony Accardo, who he described as "head of the syndicate in Chicago," sometimes ate at a restaurant frequented by some members of the Chicago team.

He recalled one time when center Mike Pyle had gone over to shake hands with Accardo. Leggett said Pyle's brother married Accardo's sister.

"This may have given someone the wrong impression," Leggett said. He called the whole investigation a "misunderstanding."

Rozelle outlined the league's investigation into rumors surrounding the Bears at a meeting of the NFL players representatives yesterday after George Halas, owner of the Bears, revealed in Chicago that the commissioner was looking into reports of a possible scandal.

"I advised them (the player representatives) to help keep squad members away from undesirable and avoid frequenting places where they might be associated with individuals of questionable background or character," Rozelle said.

"There can be no question but what association with undesirable is bad in itself and leads to these kind of inferences. We get these rumors constantly, maybe 15 to 20 in the course of a year," he continued, "and we've eliminated all of them up to now due to the fact that the only thing we have proved is faulty associations."

The player representatives were taken by complete surprise by the commissioner's revelation and Pete Retzlaff of the Philadelphia Eagles, head of the group, said the "story was being blown all out of proportion."

"Our No. 1 problem is," he said, "that the shady type seek us out and we are always cognizant of peoples reputations. To my knowledge there isn't one player who wagers on his own club because he knows he would be suspended. Who would be so stupid with so much to lose?"

Earlier in the 1962 season there were reports of unusual odds activity in games involving the Green Bay Packers against the Detroit Lions and Minnesota Vikings. Bookmakers in New York subsequently refused to accept bets on Green Bay games.

Hall Of Fame Great Rogers Hornsby Dies

CHICAGO (UPI)—All-time baseball great Rogers Hornsby died today.

Hornsby died at 10:05 a.m. in Chicago Wesley Memorial Hospital where he had been a patient since Dec. 9.

A hospital spokesman said death was apparently caused by a heart attack.

LIONS PICKED OVER STEELERS IN BOWL GAME

MIAMI (UPI)—The toughest defense in football has established the Detroit Lions as an eight-point favorite to beat the Pittsburgh Steelers in the Orange Bowl tomorrow and give Detroit its third National Football League playoff title in a row.

More than 30,000 are expected to witness the nationally-televised (CBS) kickoff at 11 a.m., (PST).

Detroit finished second in the Western Division behind the Green Bay Packers, and Pittsburgh was one rung lower than the Eastern Division champion New York Giants.

The Steelers, stung by their underdog tag and goaded in roughhouse workouts by Coach Buddy Parker all week, have been planning new offensive wrinkles to counter Detroit's defensive Goliaths.

Royals Nip Warriors By 130-129

CHICAGO (AP)—The San Francisco Warriors try to regain winning form tonight on a Midwest road trip that started off on the wrong foot.

The Cincinnati Royals hung on for a 130-129 win over the Warriors last night. After the Zephyrs game tonight, the Warriors go to St. Louis tomorrow for a game against the Hawks.

The Warriors were behind most of the way against the Royals, but caught up and tied it 100-100 early in the fourth quarter. But Cincinnati ran off seven straight points two minutes later and stayed in front for the rest of the way.

Wilt Chamberlain, leading scorer in the National Basketball Assn., poured through 45 points and took 26 rebounds for San Francisco. Tom Meschery chipped in 20 Warriors counters.

NFL Stars To Start Drills

LOS ANGELES (AP)—The Eastern and Western Conference All-Stars, who meet Jan. 13 in the National Football League's 13th Pro Bowl game, will start twice-daily workouts Monday.

The Eastern squad, under Coach Al Sherman of New York, will drill at Bovard Field on the USC campus. The Western team will work out at the Coliseum under Coach Vince Lombardi of Green Bay.

Two Marin Anglers Catch Prize Bass

Two Marin anglers qualified last week in the Schenley Sportsmen's Club striped bass award program, according to the list released today.

Paul Devaux of San Rafael caught a 21-pound, 9-ounce striper out of Richardson Bay and Gene H. Taylor of Novato pulled a 16-pound striper out of Petaluma Creek.

Hornsby had suffered a stroke last month while recuperating from surgery for cataracts.

The hospital spokesman said Hornsby appeared to be making a good recovery until last night, when his temperature rose suddenly.

Hornsby was 66 years old. He earned his place in the Hall of Fame as the greatest right-handed hitter in baseball history and was later a sometimes successful and always controversial manager. His last baseball post was with the New York Mets.

Hornsby's stroke caused partial paralysis of the left side. His condition was noticed last night and the end came quickly this morning.

CONTROVERSIAL

Hornsby was certainly the most controversial manager in major league history and one of baseball's most controversial players.

Four times he was fired as manager during the season. He managed five major league teams and piloted the St. Louis Cardinals to the National League pennant in 1926.

He three times batted over 400 in winning the National League batting championship.

He hit his personal high of .424 in 1924 and was seven times champion batter of the league. His lifetime average was .358.

Moyer-Archer Bout On TV

NEW YORK (AP)—Denny Moyer of Portland, Ore., and Joey Archer of New York, two of the classiest boxers in the middleweight division, meet tonight in a television bout that is rated even.

The baby-faced, 23-year-old Moyer recently acquired the WBA's junior middleweight crown but this synthetic diadem won't be at stake because they will come into the Madison Square Garden ring over the 154-pound limit.

A pro more than five years despite his youth, Denny has racked up a 33-8 record, including eight knockouts. He never has been stopped.

Archer, who has been boxing for cash six years, has a 32-1 record including seven kayos. He hasn't been stopped either.

The 7 p.m., PST bout will be telecast by ABC-TV.

BEARS' CASARES ADMITS TAKING AND PASSING LIE DETECTOR TESTS

CHICAGO (AP)—Veteran full-back Rick Casares of the Chicago Bears said he passed two lie detector tests, taken at the suggestion of National Football League Officials, Chicago's American reported today.

Disclosure of the tests, one taken in October, 1961, and the other 10 days ago, came amid rumors, smoldering for months, of a National Football League scandal said to involve players of four or five NFL clubs.

Casares, 31, said he took the tests at the suggestion of Bear owner-coach George Halas and NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle.

Rozelle, at Miami Beach, said yesterday a staff of trained investigators is checking reports that players on the Bears and "three or four other clubs" were associating with undesirable elements.

The Chicago Daily News said recurring reports of pro football fixes during the past two years were being investigated by three federal agencies—the Senate rackets committee, the Treasury Department and the Justice Department.

Both the Daily News and American carried front page banner stories on Casares' admission of taking the lie tests.

"I volunteered for the tests, and they told me I passed them both," Casares told the American. The newspaper said the tests involved questions as to whether Casares ever shaved points or had thrown games. "I'm completely clean and I'm not involved in a thing," Casares was quoted.

The American said Casares, who operates the Rick Casares Pro Bowl, a bowling plant at suburban Buffalo Grove, Ill., gave this background for his two lie tests:

During the 1960 Bear-Ram game in Los Angeles, Casares made two goal line blunders, costing the Bears a touchdown. He was yanked and the favored Bears eventually tied 24-24.

Later Halas and Rozelle received reports that Casares missed the plays deliberately and asked the fullback to take a lie test Oct. 16, 1961, to clear himself of the anonymously-made charges.

During that first test, Casares acknowledged he had been warned by Rozelle's predecessor as commissioner, the late Bert Bell, regarding his association with gamblers and frequenting a gamblers' hangout on Chicago's north side. The test indicated Casares did not heed Bell's warning and continued to see at least one gambler friend and frequent hoodlum hangouts.

The test taken last month covered virtually the same ground with the same results, Casares said.

He said he knew of no other player who might have been asked to take lie tests.

Novato Wins, But Other Marin League Quints Beaten In Practice Contests

Only one of the Marin prep varsity basketball teams emerged victorious yesterday in a heavy schedule of practice game action as the Novato Hornets whipped their alumni team 67-58.

In other games the Drake alumni dropped the Pirate varsity 63-59, the Tamalpais alumni defeated the varsity cagers of Tam 63-60, Marin Catholic fell to Analy 52-43 and Terra Linda was torn apart by Salesian High School 50-26.

Nick Willard led the Novato varsity in its win over the alumni with a scoring output of 18 points. More points were added for the varsity by Kelly French, 12; Arnold Schuck, 10; Bob Nichols, 10; Barry Hackmyer, 8, and Ken Beade, 5.

The Novato varsity cagers scored 17 free tosses out of 29 attempts for a 58 per cent average. Top rebounder in the game was Tom Miller with 14.

DRAKE LEADER

In the Drake contest, Larry Gaddy was the high point man for the game as he scored 16 points for the Pirate varsity. John McBride, Lorry Galassi and John Wallace each scored 10 points. For the alumni, Bill Gallagher scored 12, Joe McGrath hit for 11 and Ron Cox tallied nine.

The Drake varsity basketballers came within four points of the alumni on two occasions but could not get in the lead. The Pirate loss was the sixth in 11 games.

Warren Domino of Tam proved he is getting into the basketball pattern after a highly successful football season when he hit 29 points for the game's high against the Tam alumni.

Connie Hoetger scored 17 to lead the alumni attack and James Mitchell rallied in the closing minutes of the game to help register the victory for the alumni contingent. The alumni were leading 40-25 at the half. The varsity rallied in the second half but fell short.

The Marin Catholic Wildcats were playing their game yesterday without their leading scorer and their top rebounder. Ron O'Connell, Marin Catholic's big scorer is sidelined with a virus and Bruce Makinson is nursing a pulled tendon in his arm.

Bob Redding, O'Connell's replacement, was the high point man for the Wildcats, scoring 11 points. Tom Sodin followed with 10 digits. Marin Catholic was trailing far behind at 35-21 during the game and pulled within four points of Analy, 44-40 before the home team rolled to its victory.

The Marin Catholic B team won its game 31-29 in double overtime over the Analy B's. High point man for M.C. was Bill Shine with 12. The Wildcat J.V. team won its game by a whopping 73-33 score. Brad McDonald was high for Marin Catholic with 20 points.

Terra Linda ran into a tough customer when the Trojans took on the Salesian cagers and couldn't quite get into the ball game. George Starn, Terra Linda coach, called Salesian the best team he has faced all year.

POOR SHOOTING

The Salesian cagers outbounded, outran and outplayed Terra Linda which scored only 13 per cent of its shots in the first half, and missed on 13 free throws.

Don Dreusike was the high man for Terra Linda, scoring 15 points, more than half of the entire team's output.

The scores by quarters:

Traffic Jam In L. A. Open

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Fifty-three golfers—paced by Gene Littler with a 65—seek today to break a low scoring traffic jam in the second round of the $50,000 Los Angeles Open.

The 53, who had no trouble in mastering the lengthy 7,131-yard Rancho Park public links yesterday, represented more than a third of the field entered in the 72-hole tour opener which winds up Monday.

This is the way they did it in the greatest single-day assault on par in the 37-year history of the Open:

Littler crashed a 65, with a record-breaking back nine of 29.

A pair of 66s by two former PGA champions, Bob Rosburg and Jerry Barber.

Two 67s by newer additions to the tour ranks, Bob McCallister and Johnny Pott.

A half dozen 68s by Al Baldin, Mike Souchak, Art Wall Jr., George Bayer, Billy Maxwell and Australian Bruce Cramp-ton.

Nine 69s headed by Mister Golf himself, Arnold Palmer, and a member of the rocking chair set, E. J. (Dutch) Harrison.

21—yes, that's right—21 70s.

And 11 71s topped off by defending champion Phil Rodgers, South African Gary Player, former National Open champion Billy Casper and 1962 rookie Jack Nicklaus.

FEW DISAPPOINTMENTS

There were some disappointments in the name ranks, but they were few. Dr. Cary Middlecoff, Doug Sanders and Gay Brewer all had 75s, while former Los Angeles Open champion Johnny Bulla had a 79, and onetime Open champ Ralph Guldahl, making a comeback attempt, had an 80.

Palmer is the favorite to win this event, one in which he has never finished better than 10th. He complained of his putting yesterday but added:

"Really I shouldn't be unhappy. It was my best round ever in this event."

Nicklaus, who broke into the pro ranks with a meager $33 take in last year's L.A. Open, said he had "only one bad hole—the 11th where I took a three-over par seven."

However, he felt he was still in a good position with his opening round 71.

New Zealand Wins Four-Mile Relay

NELSON, New Zealand (AP)—The New Zealand quartet of Bill Baillie, Murray Halberg, John Davies and Peter Snell defeated the University of Oregon in a four-mile race at a track meet today, clocking 16 minutes, 20.2 seconds.

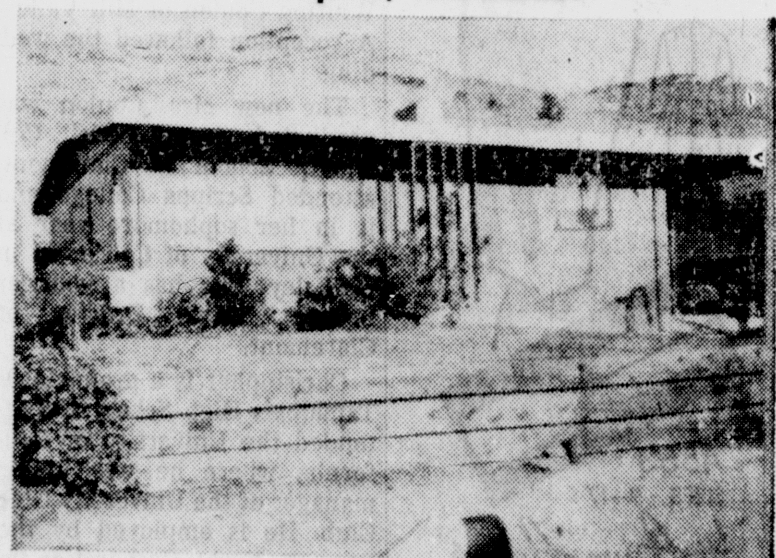

Oregon's team of Vic Reeve, Archie San Romani, Dyrrol Burleson and Keith Forman was clocked in 16:20.6.

The San Rafael High School cagers lost a close game to Petaluma High School yesterday 43-41. High scorer for the Bulldogs was Rod Monti with 14 points.

Boycott Adds Fuel To Sports Dispute

LOS ANGELES (AP)—The National Collegiate Athletic Assn., its battle lines drawn firmer than ever in the amateur sports struggle with the Amateur Athletic Union, will take a close look in the next few days at the colleges' part in fund-raising for the Olympic Games.

"On the one hand, we and the high schools are being asked to go out and raise money for the Olympics, and on the other, we are told by the AAU that the high school and college kids won't be eligible to compete in the event they're collecting money for," said Walter Byers, the NCAA's executive director, today.

The NCAA quota in the past for the combined U.S. athletic effort to raise money for the Olympic team has been about $350,000. Added to this are monies credited to the NCAA from receipts of Olympic trials and other competitions directed at forming the Olympic team.

The matter has come under the scrutiny of the NCAA Olympic Committee, headed by Biggie Munn of Michigan State. The committee is responsible for directing the colleges' fund-raising program.

What the committee has decided may be made known when its report is released next Tuesday during the next-to-last session of the week-long NCAA convention. The meeting opened yesterday with more fuel added to the fire of the amateur sports dispute.

The top development was disclosure that the influential Eastern College Athletic Conference has sent a letter to each of its member schools urging them to refrain from competing in the indoor track season, which opens in Boston a week from today.

The letter from Commissioner Asa Bushnell, mailed from the conference office in New York, carries a "do not enter" appeal—unless the meets should be sanctioned by the NCAA—supported U.S. Track and Field Federation.

Involved are all of the major track powers of the East, including 120 or so members of the nation's largest conference.

These colleges traditionally have furnished a major part of the competitors for the AAU-sanctioned indoor meets in the East.

The effect will be to cut drastically, if not eliminate, collegiate participation in the indoor meets. Most observers feel that few, if any, of the schools will reject this stand taken by their conference representatives.

The ECAC "boycot" supports an NCAA recommendation made to all its members last fall. It puts the ECAC in line with many other conferences which have issued similar instructions—including the Big Ten, the Big Eight, Big Six and several others.

Its significance, however, lies in the fact that the ECAC represents the bulk of the schools, and coaches, who have enjoyed the friendliest relations with the AAU, and have played such a big part in the success of the indoor track season.

None of the Eastern indoor meets has sought sanction by the federation, which was created by the NCAA, high schools, YMCA, and related groups as part of their three-way fight to obtain more say in administration of amateur sports in the United States.

The San Rafael Recreation Department adult basketball program will get underway Monday, it was announced by Joseph D. Rodota, head of the department.

A total of 19 teams comprising three leagues will make up the program. The A League will play Wednesday nights, the B League will play Monday nights and the C League will see action on Tuesday and Thursday nights.

All games will be played at San Rafael High School. Spectators may see the games free of charge, Rodota said.

U. P. INTERNATIONAL

The Big Six basketball race may be just out of the shell, but it's already well scrambled.

The nearest thing to a favorite, nationally fifth-ranked UCLA, went cold last night at Seattle and allowed Washington to sneak by with a 62-61 upset win.

Meanwhile, at Berkeley, California's superior board strength prevailed as the dark horse Bears outlasted Southern California, 72-65.

Both battles are repeated tonight and Stanford joins the fun Tuesday when it faces the Bears at Berkeley. The race appears so close that the team that can win a few in the enemy gyms should be the one that picks up all the marbles.

Washington got a tremendous performance from center Dale Easley, who banged home 25 points and held the Bruins' Fred Slaughter to 2 points and five fouls.

Bob Goodrich had 13 for the Bruins who led 39-35 at the half but then scored one point in nine minutes as the Huskies tallied 19.

UCLA roared back, but not quite far enough. Fred Goss of UCLA missed a jumper with 14 seconds to go and Washington's fine forward, Ed Correll, and four Bruins came down with the ball. Some wrestling followed as the Husky team poured onto the floor. No punches were thrown, however.

At Berkeley, reserve Dan Wolthers and consistent Dick Smith were the Bears' best gunners with 16 and 15 points. Dan Luskin hit his eight free throws and now has 29 for 29 on the season.

Gordy Martin had 17 to lead the men of Troy, but California rolled up a 13 point lead early in the going and the Trojans could never quite catch up although they whittled the margin down to three points at one point.

Outside of the Big Six last night, things went more according to form.

Nationally 10th-ranked Oregon State looked like the Coast's best as it demolished Washington State, 74-47. Mel Counts and Terry Baker put on a great show and hit 21 and 16 points respectively.

Arizona State drubbed New Mexico State behind Art Becker's 28 points. The nationally fourth-ranked Sun Devils now have the West's best record, 10-1.

Two Backs Ink Pacts With 49ers

The San Francisco 49ers today signed two collegiate captains to 1963 National Football League contracts—Mike Lind of Notre Dame and back Rodger McFarland of Kansas. The 220-pound Lind and the 190-pound McFarland were drafted as Redshirts in 1961 on the 5th and 20th rounds.

Lind was hampered by injuries this year, but pounded out 450 yards on 87 carries in a big 1961 season.

If McFarland tries his hand at defense for the Prospectors, it will add one participant to the battle royal that is sure to take place at the 1963 training camp for defensive backfield posts.

Veterans Jim Ridlon, Jerry Mertens, Eddie Dove and Abe Woodson were hard-pressed by newcomers El Kimbrough and Dale Messer in 1962. Now the 49ers have signed up UCLA's Kermit Alexander and Bowling Green's Don Lisbon, two highly-prized defensive prospects, and Dave Baker, an all-time 49er defensive great, is due out of the Army.

Terra Linda Makes Varsity Cage Debut In Marin League

(Third in a series on Marin Athletic League basketball prospects.)

By RALPH CHATOIAN

Terra Linda High will open its first varsity basketball season in the Marin Athletic League when the loop opens next Friday.

The Trojans will be coached by George Starn who will be starting his first year as a varsity coach. He has transferred from San Rafael High School where he coached the Class B team last year.

According to Starn, the Trojan cagers have done a good job moving up from junior varsity competition into the more competitive varsity play. Last season against MCAL teams the Trojans compiled an even 5-5 win-loss record in junior varsity action.

BALANCED ATTACK

The Terra Linda attack is designed to be balanced with high point men varying each night. Ed Connell, a 6-1 junior forward has probably done the major share of the scoring so far in the practice game campaign.

The Trojans have had a disappointing practice slate so far with only one win in seven games. They beat Novato in a consolation game of the Marin Athletic League cage tourney to wind up in seventh place, one notch over Novato.

Besides Connell at one of the starting forward spots, Terra Linda probably will open the season with Jim Dalton, a 5-11 senior, at the other forward position.

The starting guards were listed by Starn to be Don Dreu-sike, a 5-9 senior, and Don Knotts, a 5-10 sophomore. Starting center is Bob King, a rangy 6-6 senior.

King probably will prove to be a big man on the boards, using all the advantage of his height. He is the top rebounder for the Trojans.

Starn called Connell the top defensive man on the team. Terra Linda will emphasize a control type of offense which picks its shots.

The main reserve for Terra Linda will be forward Jim Kane, a six-foot junior. Forward Mike Galvin, a cager who is nursing a broken arm, is expected to rejoin the Trojans during the first part of the league season. Galvin did a fine job while with the Trojans' frosh squad last year.

OTHER PLAYERS

Other members of the Terra Linda squad are forwards Bob Cooney (5-11, junior), Jack Edwards (6-0, senior), and Rich Reed (6-2, sophomore); guards Jeff Chapman (5-9, senior), Bill Lee (5-10, junior) and Jim Stone (5-2, senior); and center Mike Moore (6-2, senior).

Starn picked San Rafael, Tamalpais and Marin Catholic as the top teams in the league but added Drake and Redwood would win their share of games.

Success Of New Local Bank Will Benefit Marin

When the stockholders of the new Redwood National Bank held their first meeting recently, one of their directors—retired superior judge Jordan L. Martinelli—addressed the group to explain the place of the locally-owned independent bank.

We need large banks; that is one reason that big banks engulfed our small independent banks in Marin and for a brief period we had none of the smaller ones.

But there are functions which the smaller, independent, locally owned and managed banks can perform competitively with the branches of the giant concerns.

So we need the smaller, local institutions, too.

In this space we lamented the passing of our old locally-owned bank a couple of years ago.

And when the first new local bank,

Bank of Marin, made its appearance some months ago we hailed the event in this space. Bank of Marin is chartered under state laws.

Comes now the newest Marin bank, Redwood National, chartered as a national bank under federal law.

It is entirely locally owned and locally operated. Its president and chief executive officer Byron Leydecker, is well known in our community where he served some years as branch manager for one of the larger chain banks before being transferred and promoted.

Now he is back as a leader in the newest local bank and we know that he will resume his place as a leading participant in community affairs.

His staff boasts the youngest average age of any in the state. They are energetic and eager-to-serve.

We wish them success, for their success will redound to the benefit of all of Marin.

Fattening, Indigestible, Delicious

Christmas and New Year's are the time of great feasting and rejoicing in the Western world—and an annual boon to the makers of Tums, Alka-Seltzer and various other stomach soothers.

Besides the Gargantuan dinners, there is the almost endless round of between meal eating and drinking. It's the candy time of year and the selection ranges from Aunt Mary's home-made divinity to choice imported chocolates.

Was more indigestible food ever invented than mince pie, plum pudding with rich, buttery hard sauce, or some of the dips and appetizers? They make our mouth water just thinking about them.

All these goodies and the big dinners too. Please pass the bicarb!

STOPS OWN FUNERAL

It's not every person who can halt his own funeral. But one individual did just that not long ago in Poland.

The startled man, who had been out of town, found out what had happened after stopping the funeral that was presumably his.

During his absence, the supposed dead man's friend, who occupied the same rented room with him took the wrong jacket when he hurriedly left the lodgings one day.

A little later the roommate was killed in a streetcar accident. When police searched his pockets for identification papers, they figured that the name and address they found in the jacket was that of the dead victim.

While there is little chance that you will ever be involved in such a mix-up, don't overlook the inevitable fact that your own funeral will sooner or later mark the finale for your role in the stage of life.

Keep asking yourself why am I here, where did I come from, where am I going, and you will add much meaning and purpose to whatever span of life God has allotted to you.

"There is an appointed time for everything, and a time for every affair under the heavens." (Ecclesiastes 3:1)

Let me live each day as if it were my last, O Lord.

MARIN LOOKS AT POLITICS

Bagley Seeks Committee Spot After Backing Losing Leader

By CHAPIN A. DAY

Although the official voting will not be next week, it looks like the ball game is all over for the Republican leadership in the State Assembly—and Marin Assemblyman William T. Bagley's candidate, Robert T. Managan of Tracy, apparently has lost. The winner: Charles J. Conrad of Sherman Oaks.

As we've mentioned here before, the victory comes as the result of a peculiar alliance in the Republican contingent. Conrad represents what might be considered the conservative—or Joe Shell—wing and support has come from the Democratic leadership in the House, specifically the only Democrat who can make his leadership felt Speaker Jesse Unruh.

Monagan, Bagley et al had made things difficult for Un-ruh last year and he publicly said that if the Republican leadership intended to lead a strong opposition, he'd take action. Specific action was assumed to mean withholding of committee chairmanships from Republicans.

This affected a number of GOP votes.

BUT THE "Young Turks," as they are sometimes called, still thought they could get Monagan in—until the vote from San Diego came in. The Turks had foreseen two sure and possibly four new votes from the far south. But three of the four new assemblymen announced for Conrad and the ball game was over.

This means that Unruh will have the most complete control over the Assembly when it convenes on Monday, that any speaker has had in 40 years.

With 34 of the 80 assemblymen newcomers, their impact on legislation undoubtedly will be tremendous. Perhaps it is well the lower house has a strong speaker. If it had a weak one, the newcomers might well run away with the session.

BAGLEY HAS decided to make a move himself by attempting to win a seat on the important Assembly Rules Committee. Rules is not an appointive committee under present Assembly by-laws. It is named by the party caucuses.

There will be two (three if Conrad is minority leader) seats vacant on Rules. Bagley is campaigning among his own delegation for one of the

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

Anti-War Units All Patriotic

EDITOR, Independent-Journal:

A sobering thought should rightfully mar the widespread satisfaction with President Kennedy's "successful" Cuban brinkmanship. If Khrushchev had not backed down, many parts of the world, including our own country, might have been reduced to a shambles.

Our willingness to "press the button" cannot be counted on to always induce retreat. In past history the "bluff" has always eventually been called. Are we admitting to ourselves that we have gone so far down the road to war that protest is futile?

The peace movements constitute a revolt against the drift toward nuclear conflict. They seem weak because apathy and fear (of dissent) have prevented mass participation. Our recent "narrow brush" with Armageddon should shock many more Americans into awareness of the necessity for urgent and concerted action.

The various anti-war organizations, including: The United World Federalists, The American Association for the United Nations, SANE, Turn Toward Peace, Women for Peace, and American Friends Service Committee—and others, provide the tools for this action. These organizations are patriotic in the highest sense of the term.

Peace is not a Communist weapon, it is a necessity for our continuing slow progress toward the goal of "Liberty and Justice for All." Even if we "won" a war with Russia, it can be assumed that the "way of life" that we cherish would be shattered for generations to come.

Negroes Not Yet Free In Marin

EDITOR, Independent-Journal:

Congratulations on your editorial of Jan. 2, "Time For Rededication to Liberty, Justice for All." You are right, "the anniversary of the Emancipation Proclamation is a good time for all of us to rededicate (or simply dedicate, for those of us who haven't thought about it seriously before) ourselves to the words we speak in our oath of allegiance: 'One nation, vacancies, but he's not too hopeful. He was for Monagan.

One other thing might happen too. Unruh has threatened to change the by-laws so that the Rules Committee is appointed by him, the way other committees are. If he goes through with this threat (he has enough votes), Bagley won't have a chance.

under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all."

A hundred years of time has passed since President Lincoln "freed" the Negro slaves of our land, but the Negroes are not yet free, even here in California, and seemingly most of all in Marin. With our All-American honors and highest average family income, our physically beautiful county is as blighted as any when it comes to that matter of "Justice for All" of which you write.

We are writing this only as individuals, but we believe we express the common sentiments of the Marin Committee for Fair Play in Housing and our two new church-related groups, the Catholic Interracial Council of Marin and the Protestant Interracial Fellowship of the Marin County Council of Churches. We accept the I-J's pledge of rededication to freedom and liberty for all. We believe that newspapers, like individuals, have moral responsibilities to their communities, and since the I-J has responded positively to this particular responsibility, we take you at your word. Your responsibility is great because your influence is great. We now look to you for leadership in the cause for interracial justice in Marin.

Not The End Of Reapportionment

EDITOR, Independent-Journal:

I am writing to express my appreciation to you for the editorial support given by the San Rafael Independent-Jour-

We almost surely haven't seen the last of such proposals to change radically the present composition of the State Senate. I am certain that a continuing effort must be made to point out that such proposals would work against the best interests of the entire state.

Police Chief Isn't Appointive Yet

EDITOR, Independent-Journal:

I must take exception to the article in tonight's I-J (Dec. 31) entitled "How Will Council Appoint Police Chief?"

This title coupled with the quoted comments of the San Rafael City Council would have us believe that an appointive police chief is already an accomplished fact.

Whether or not the office of police chief becomes appointive or remains elective has yet to be decided by the electorate.

A chief of police, elected by the people and responsible to the people, follows our democratic heritage of election of the best qualified candidate.

Why should this most important office become a political plum, bestowed by the city council?

Dwight Taylor, son of Laurette and Charles A. Taylor, tells of the days when his father traveled with a carnival and sponsored a trained rat show. For the climax, one rat shot off a cannon, and another, labeled "President Garfield" raised his tail with the American flag tied thereto. The catch was that carnival crowds didn't seem to appreciate trained rats.

The concession next door was faring even worse. It was a replica of Lincoln's birthplace. One day Mr. Taylor suggested that the historical appeal of the Lincoln exhibit be enhanced by doing the rat circus inside the log cabin. The rats had never before performed indoors, so when the cannon shot went off "President Garfield" hoisted his flag all right, but, terrified by the noise, leaped into the audience and disappeared into a rat hole.

Mr. Taylor never ceased wondering about the fate of a poor rat with an American flag attached to his tail.

Dunkopf's friends convinced him that his wife was spending too much money. "I'll read her the riot act tonight," swore Dunkopf. "For the rest of this fiscal year at least she's going to do a little cutting down."

The next morning they asked him how he had made out. "Great," he said. "I'm giving up poker, liquor and tobacco."

Many Marinites Stayed Home For 'Safe And Sane' New Year's Eve

They tell us California is now the biggest state in the union, and the crowded highways seem to prove it.

Maybe that's why so many of us stayed at home for a "safe and sane" New Year's Eve. This made it at least a little less crowded on the highways for those who did take to the road.

BUT WHEREVER you are, you can feel the pinch of population growth. Again we had our share of highway tragedies. And even at home, it wasn't entirely safe. Imagine sitting around the fireplace, smug in the belief that this year you're completely safe. And zing, a bullet ricochets around the living room and hits one of your "safe and sane" guests. It's enough to drive you insane.

Felt sort of sorry for friends who went all the way to Reno to celebrate the new year. But they came back to report clear weather and good roads both ways, with a profitable interlude in between.

ONE GAL, who never gambles anyway, found a dollar while waiting for her husband in one of the casinos. She felt guilty keeping a dollar she hadn't earned so decided to feed it back to the machine. But it wouldn't stay fed. She feels more guilty than ever now—with almost 50 unearned dollars.

Another friend says he put in two dimes and hit two jackpots. Either Marin residents are extremely lucky, or the losers just aren't talking.

HUMANE Society officials are dedicated men when it comes to protecting animals.

Last week a Lucas Valley home was destroyed by fire. Into the burning building went Bernie Weller of the Marin County Humane Society to look for a pet dog. He didn't find the dog but did manage to save a life. As the crowd waited tensely, Weller came staggering out, holding a dazed little mouse by the tail. He gently laid it alongside a hedge and smiled as the grateful mouse scampered away.

GREETINGS to Juanita's Galley, which barely made it into the new year. As you know, it used to be the ferryboat Charles Van Damme. One publication referred to it as the "Charles Van Dem."

"Dem" may look better in print than "Damme," but they don't have to get that prudish about it, demmit!

IT IS TRUE that someone offered to bail out the debt-ridden Galley for $10,000. But there was a catch; the benefactor wanted 51 per cent interest in the joint. You can imagine what Juanita told him.

Record Indicates That U.S. 'Big Labor' Needs To Do Housecleaning

WASHINGTON—When labor unions become so powerful—as some have in the United States—that they override the public interest, they are bound to face reprisals by an angry public opinion.

When powerful labor unions are populated by corrupt leaders, public reaction will in the end demand legal reforms equal to the need.

This is why the 1,700,000-member International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Warehousemen, and Helpers (the Teamsters' Union) is in bad with American public opinion.

This is why it is inaccurate—and a sign of weakness—for its apologists to hide behind the claim that Attorney General Robert Kennedy is engaged in some kind of "personal vendetta" against Teamster president James R. Hoffa.

QUITE APART from the difficulty the Justice Department has had in amassing sufficient tight evidence to persuade a jury to convict Hoffa of personal involvement—and in the Nashville trial it had to contend with what Judge William E. Miller described as three "shameful" attempts to influence jurors—the successful and pending prosecutions of Teamsters' leaders are enough to show that the government is attempting to deal with a very dangerous and offensive condition.

Here is a revealing tabulation of the Justice Department actions dealing with the Teamsters, under both the Eisenhower and Kennedy administrations, generally bearing on violations of the Taft-Hartley, Hobbs, and Labor-Management Reporting and Disclosure Acts:

Teamster Officials: indicted

The Country Parson

"Criticism may be unpleasant to accept—but, then, so is medicine."

ments, 72; convictions, 22; acquittals, 12.

Teamster Associations: indictments, 20; convictions, 7; acquittals, 1.

SOME OF THE notable convictions include Dave Beck, former Teamster president, for income tax evasion and for grand larceny in a state case; William Presser, president of the Ohio Joint Council, for obstruction of justice; Anthony (Tony Ducks) Corallo, official of the widely publicized "paper locals" in New York, for attempting to fix a Federal bankruptcy case.

One source of Hoffa's power is the $180,000,000 Central States, Southeast, and Southwest Areas Pension Fund of the Teamsters' Union which has been invested in most unusual directions. The investments made of most union pension funds are extremely prudent. But this Hoffa union fund has been used to finance a motley lot of enterprises including fancy motels (one of which in Reno went bankrupt recently), a cemetery, gambling hotels, golf courses, laundries, and a health club.

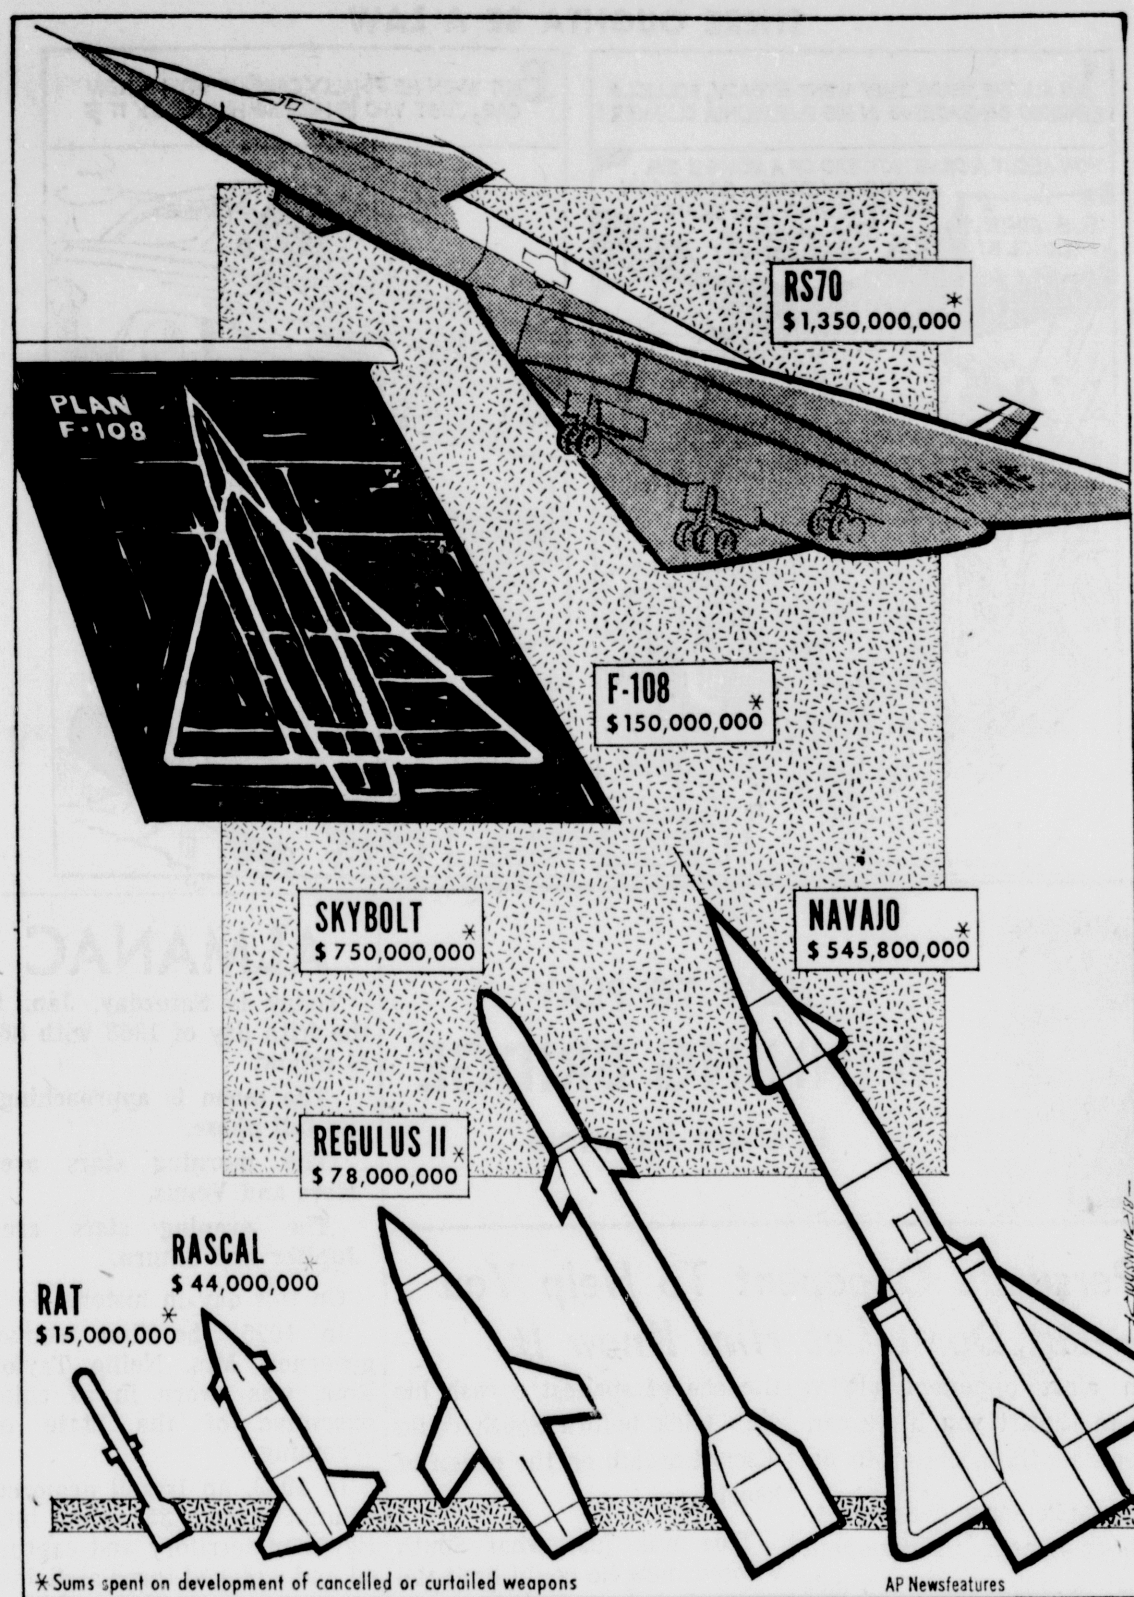

It is estimated that 60 per cent of this Teamster pension fund is invested in real estate loans and mortgages, which contrasts—surprisingly—with the fact that, according to the Securities and Exchange Commission, less than 3 per cent of all other union pension funds is similarly invested.

IT SEEMS to me that these opinions, expressed by James P. Mitchell when he was Secretary of Labor under the Eisenhower administration, are more pertinent than ever:

"Too many union leaders are making the same mistake which many industrialists made a half-century ago when their attitude was interpreted as being—'The public be damned.' Their sense of public responsibility is not equal to the powerful role they play in public affairs."

"Union leaders can no longer cloister themselves, can no longer stand united only against the anti-labor groups. They must unite against dishonest people within their own ranks. What they do, or do not do, will mean the difference between massive intervention by the public or a powerful partnership for good that depends upon the healthy instrument of self-regulation to keep labor's house in order."

SKYBOLT MOST COSTLY Dumped Weapons Expensive

BY ASSOCIATED PRESS

When a Christmas toy outlives its day, it's thrown out. So is a weapon.

And the latest addition to Uncle Sam's military scrapheap, the Skybolt missile, is the costliest throwaway of them all.

It joins such weapons as the Regulus II, Bullpup, Navajo, Rascal and the F-108 fighter which were canceled after many millions of dollars were spent on them (see map).

The U. S. Government spent 750 million dollars on Skybolt before the Kennedy administration decided to scrap it. What the country got for its money in immediate results were six tests of the air-to-ground rocket. Only the last one was anywhere near successful and that came after the announcement Skybolt was being canceled.

The Pentagon has spent even more — a staggering 1.35 billion dollars — for a plane that has yet to fly. In fact a completed one doesn't exist. This is the RS-70 which may make a first test flight next March or April.

The 2,000-mile-an-hour bomber has been batted back and forth between the Air Force, the Defense Department and the budget makers of Congress. Defense Secretary Robert Mc-Namara is strongly opposed to the aircraft and there is no certainty or even strong hope that the Air Force will be permitted to build more than three test planes.

McNamara estimates a force of 150 of the RS-70s would cost over 10 billion dollars.

The Pentagon is quick to point out that all is not lost when a weapons system is junked. Much of the research and development work can be and is incorporated into subsequent, more sophisticated weapons.

For instance the guidance system of the Navajo ground-to-ground missile, canceled in 1957 after 545 million dollars had been spent on it, would be in the highly successful Polaris. The Navy saw use of the F-108's navigation-missile firing system for its own Vigilante attack plane.

Weapons die stillborn for a number of reasons. They are superseded by more advanced designs. Or breakthroughs in technology or changes in strategy make them obsolete. Or they just cost more than they are worth.

That's what shot down Skybolt. President John F. Kennedy decided that to get 100-plus Skybolts on duty would cost at least 2.5 billion dollars. He figured the Polaris missile, already proven, would do the same job better, particularly when shot from submarines.

There is great pressure from dropping a weapon. There is, of course, the manufacturer. Douglas Aircraft Co., maker of Skybolt, defended that design but added it was in no position to assess all the military considerations of the cancellation.

The service developing a weapon understandably is loyal to it. In the Skybolt's case, there was great pressure from Britain which had counted on the missile as the striking arm of its jet bomber fleet.

Air Force Chief of Staff Gen. Curtis E. LeMay vigorously defends the RS-70 against Pentagon claims that intercontinental missiles have outmoded the manned bomber. Air Force and congressional advocates insist men can perform some functions robot weapons never can. McNamara claims present or planned aircraft missiles and Polaris submarines could "achieve practically complete destruction" of the enemy weapon system.

And out of such differences of opinion has grown a very expensive, electronically sophisticated junk pile.

Among the most costly throwaways of recent years were:

REGULUS II — Canceled by the Navy in 1958 "to provide best balance in over-all Navy weapons systems within the resources available at present." The 1,000-mile range missile, on which 78 million dollars had been spent under contract to Chance Vought Aircraft Inc., was later superseded by the Polaris. The Regulus program had called for conversion of five submarines and seven cruisers.

RAT — A missile project canceled by the Navy in 1959 after 15 million dollars had been spent on it. The Navy canceled, it said, because superior anti-submarine weapons were being developed.

BULLPUP — A Tactical air-to-ground rocket canceled by the Navy because a more improved weapon was being developed.

NAVAJO — Canceled in 1957 because the accelerated parent the ground-to-ground Navajo would soon be obsolete. The Air Force spent 545.8 million dollars on the missile.

RASCAL — An air-to-surface missile canceled in 1958 after 44 million dollars had been spent on it under contract with Bell Aerospace Co. Development delays and technical advances made it feasible to drop Rascal in favor of the Hound-dog rocket.

F-108 — A 2,000-MPH interceptor, the F-108 was canceled in 1959 by the Air Force after spending about 150 million dollars on it under contract to North American Aviation Inc. The Air Force said even a few squadrons of 25 planes each would cost between five and eight billion dollars and missiles were making heavy demands on the Air Force budget.

Future Of Nixon Is Question Mark

By JOE LEWIS

BEVERLY HILLS (AP)—Richard M. Nixon, looking tanned and fit, is living at a relaxed pace these days—playing golf and spending more time with his family—as he ponders his future.

But his future, apparently, is just as much a question mark to the former vice president as it is to everyone else.

Robert Finch, one of Nixon's inner circle, said the man who nearly became president in 1960 is mulling this basic decision:

"Shall I speak out on public affairs? Or should I stay completely out of the public arena?"

The answer isn't expected for months.

Nixon has been in seclusion since Nov. 7, when his hopes for a political comeback were shattered in a losing bid to unseat Democratic Gov. Edmund G. Brown.

At a farewell news conference, he bitterly criticized the press and said he was quitting politics.

But associates say Nixon since has been getting thousands of letters, from throughout the nation encouraging him to speak out on public issues.

"He's had as many letters and cards this Christmas as he's had at any Christmas," says a former aide.

As if in reply to an unasked question, he added: "If anyone doubts it, I'll open the closet and show it to him."

The aide gave this description of Nixon's current state of mind:

"He's not moping around the house, second-guessing himself or blaming anyone. He's not mad at anybody.

"Financially speaking, losing the governorship was the best thing that happened to Dick. Now he's free to consider a lot of lucrative offers."

Nixon amassed a sizable financial nest-egg in recent years, chiefly from writing projects.

After the election, Nixon vacationed for three weeks in the Bahamas and Key West, Fla. He's been at home since, except for a three-day visit to New York — described by friends as a non-political trip to renew old acquaintances.

"In California," a Nixon source said, "he's regarded as the guy who got beat for the governorship. But he stopped traffic in New York."

He said Nixon made a window-shopping tour of Manhattan's Fifth Avenue at noon—and was besieged by well-wishers.

The source denied reports that Nixon plans to move to the East.

Will he consider a job with a large corporation? "I don't think he's really interested in that," the source added, "but you can never turn your back on really big money."

However, Herbert G. Klein, former Nixon news secretary and once again editor of the San Diego Union, said he thinks Nixon will return to the Los Angeles law firm that he served as a consultant before he ran for governor.

There also is a possibility that Nixon might undertake a weekly television program devoted to analysis of world and national affairs.

"Of course," another source said, "it would have to be the right kind of format."

He doesn't want to take a job where people will think he's running for office again—and he doesn't want to sell aspirin on TV.

"It would be a think-piece type show, part live, part filmed and part tape, with distinguished guests each week."

And he would probably try to put issues in perspective rather than comment on day-to-day happenings in politics. This source, too, emphasized that nothing has been decided yet.

"Meanwhile," he said, "Nixon's been on the golf course nearly every morning and he's shooting in the high 80s again. He catches up on correspondence at the law office in the afternoon and has friends over for dinner in the evening."

On Christmas Day the Nixons held a family reunion, including his mother, Hannah M. Nixon, and relatives of his wife, Patricia, in their rambling, modernistic, white mansion.

A big Christmas tree, that could be seen from the street, stood in the living room by a picture window, and Nixon himself played Christmas carols on the piano.

"I would say," said a friend, "that this has been a happy Christmas for Dick and his family."

California Is Putting Squeeze On Smog

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

LOS ANGELES—Among the things Californians are looking forward to this new year is compulsory smog control devices on new automobiles. That is especially true in this metropolis of smog and freeways.

After months of talk, the Air Pollution Control District, State Motor Vehicle Pollution Control Board, legislators and automotive manufacturers agreed on a device designed to reduce contaminating elements in auto exhaust.

But experts admit it would not solve the problem entirely and certainly not immediately. The device is not 100 per cent effective and there are many contributors to smog other than vehicle exhaust.

Experts approached the auto smog control device from two directions: the crank case and the exhaust.

One approach is a simple tube which directs fumes from the crank case back into the carburetor for reburning. This is the system which will be required equipment on 1963 cars sold in California.

The other approach involves mounting a device on the exhaust pipe, perhaps in place of the muffler, to burn out hydrocarbons. Or the mechanism can use a catalyst to absorb a required amount of carbon monoxide and hydrocarbons.

Attempts to control eye irritating smog caused by cars will take its first giant step in 1963, backed by legislation requiring anti-smog devices on new cars.

Plans for requiring similar controls on old and used cars were being worked out by the state motor vehicle pollution control board. Enforcement of such laws probably would be aided by making the device a prerequisite to registration.

Commercial and public transportation firms also were expecting state deadlines with which to conform.

Robert M. Barsky, public information officer of the Air Pollution Control District, said air pollution caused by sources other than automobiles were almost negligible.

But when the APCD was formed in 1947, stationary sources of smog also presented a problem to experts devoted to "cleaning up" the Los Angeles atmosphere.

Rubbish, industry and emissions from petroleum manufacture and processing were the largest contributors to air pollution next to the automobile.

Since 1947, the rubbish problem is completely under control," said Barsky. Laws forbid open burning dumps, clearing land by burning and incinerators. All cities in Los Angeles county agree to eliminate municipal incinerators and the single chamber incinerator was outlawed.

As a result, all rubbish presently is being disposed of by burial.

The APCD attacked the industrial air pollution problem by insisting firms install control equipment, such as floating roofs on petroleum storage tanks.

Petroleum processing plants have set up sulphur recovery systems which are taking about 800 tons of sulphur from the atmosphere daily, said Barsky. It is re-used for making chemicals. Vapor controls also have been ordered for loading tank trucks.

Another smog source is power plants. Law forbids the burning of fuel oil at such plants from April 15 to Nov. 15. Natural gas is used during that time.

Eventually, smog controlling agencies hope to require the burning of natural gas all year long by power plants. But before that can happen, additional natural gas must be piped into Southern California.

Adenauer Turns 87, Must Retire Soon

BONN (UPI)—Chancellor Konrad Adenauer turned 87 today and it probably will be his last birthday as head of the West German government.

He shows no outward sign of age. He ordered no change in traditional birthday ceremonies which would exhaust a far younger man.

A steady stream of German politicians planned to call — from mid-morning to darkness.

Adenauer never has allowed his age to worry him. Anyone daring to ask him directly about it receives the same answer as Adenauer gave to Parliament three years ago — "What is so important about my age as long as I am well and completely capable?"

Adenauer last month was finally forced to make concession.

Under heavy pressure from political friends, enemies and the public, he named the coming fall as the date for his retirement.

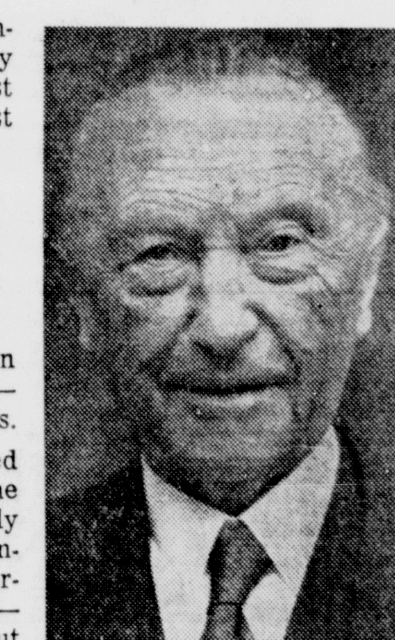

Adenauer announced he would retire at the end of parliament's summer recess. Parliament usually resumes business around the middle of September.

The chancellor, however, emphasized to an American television interviewer that he had in fact not named a precise date.

Officials of Adenauer's Christian Democratic Party repeated that next fall must bring Adenauer's retirement.

Political parties are unanimous in the opinion that if Adenauer refuses to step down, then as promised, there will be a serious political crisis even more serious than the one which Germany has just survived.

Economics Minister and Vice Chancellor Ludwig Erhard is

KONRAD ADENAUER
No outward change

billed as the man most likely to succeed Adenauer. Foreign Minister Gerhard Schroeder is in the running as well but his chances are regarded as slim compared to Erhard's.

Adenauer's future is uncertain. He probably will stay on as a member of parliament and act as a "father adviser" to the government.

Some of Adenauer's political supporters want him to run for the presidency in 1964, one year before the next general elections. The present president, Heinrich Lübke, has said he does not want to be re-elected when his five-year first term expires.

Adenauer could have become president in 1959. He changed his mind about running for the figurehead position when he discovered he would not be able to exert any political pressure on government policy and because everyone wanted Erhard to succeed him. Adenauer even today is opposed to Erhard being made chancellor.

Kerr's Death Great Loss To Demos

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

There is no such thing as an indispensable man but history has proved that some men leave certain marks that cannot be erased.

A few of these men are still alive, among them Sir Winston Churchill and Dr. Albert Schweitzer. Those who have died won't be forgotten.

Such a man was Sen. Robert S. Kerr of Oklahoma, who died this week at the age of 66. His life was a success story that matched any of the rags-to-riches tales written by Horatio Alger Jr.

Kerr was born in a log cabin and from this humble but proud beginning he became a millionaire many times over.

But Kerr made his greatest impression in the United States Senate, which he entered in 1948. In the 14 years that followed Kerr became its most powerful and most influential member. His prominence was akin to the respect which the late Sen. Robert A. Taft earned during his tenure as "Mr. Republican."

President John F. Kennedy, who attended Kerr's funeral in Oklahoma City yesterday, will feel the loss of Kerr when the new Congress convenes this month. For Kennedy was depending on Kerr to get his legislation enacted.

We have many great Republicans among us, liberal and conservative, yet none has yet taken the place of Bob Taft. The same may be said of the Democrats, and it is not likely that one will soon enjoy the particular position achieved by Bob Kerr.

Names That Made News During Week

Arthur Dean—He resigned as chief U. S. delegate to the disarmament conference in Geneva, a position which he served under Eisenhower and Kennedy.

Gen. Lyman L. Lemnitzer — He succeeded Gen. Lauris Norstad as NATO commander.

Nelson Rockefeller — He began his second term as governor of New York on New Year's Day.

Fidel Castro — He ridiculed President Kennedy for welcoming ransomed Cuban prisoners at Miami's Orange Bowl.

Around The World Around The Week

Saigon — Three American soldiers were killed and four wounded in South Viet Nam by Communist Viet Cong Guerrillas firing on five U. S. Army Helicopters.

Andover, Maine — The Telstar communications satellite, which was thought to be dead, came back to life. Another communications moonlet, called Relay began working for the first time.

Leopoldville — U. N. troops captured Jadotville in a concerted drive to bring secessionist Katanga province into the federalized Congo.

Moscow — A group of 32 Russian Baptists sought protection in the U. S. Embassy against religious persecution.

Hollywood — Movie actors Dick Powell, 58, and Jack Carson, 52 died of cancer.

West opened the jack of clubs, covered by the queen, king and ace. Now South had to worry about losing a club, a diamond, and two trumps.

TRUMP LOSS

South could hold the trump loss to one trick if an opponent held the doubleton ace of spades—provided South could guess which opponent had this holding.

For example, suppose West holds A-10 of spades, but not the nine. South leads a low trump to dummy's king and returns a trump, playing low from his own hand. West must play the ace, and South still has the queen to draw the last trump.

WON'T WORK

The play wouldn't work in this case. West would play the nine of spades first and would still have the A-10 behind declarer's queen.

South was sure to lose two trump tricks unless he persuaded an opponent to help him.

After winning the first trick with the ace of clubs South must prepare for a fake discard. He cashes the ace and king of hearts and then leads a low trump toward dummy.

HEART QUEEN

This looks as though South wants to reach dummy with the king of spades in order to take an immediate discard on the queen of hearts.

When the hand was actually played, West stepped up with

Q. Can you name the textbook that's completely rewritten every day?

A. There is one, you know. It's your daily newspaper. When you stop to think, isn't your newspaper the most up-to-date textbook on a great many school subjects?

It's unsurpassed in coverage of current political, social or economic events. It's filled with reports of latest discoveries in biology, chemistry and all sciences. It also fills in background on foreign lands for foreign-language study. It prints articles on local history... food, family, furnishings news of use in homemaking courses... texts of great speeches... examples of English composition and good grammar.

No wonder more and more teachers are using newspapers in classrooms to enrich basic-course material. In fact, newspapers have become such a widespread teaching tool that an extensive program of teachers' workshops has been created. At these sessions—held at various colleges throughout the country—teachers learn the most effective techniques for using newspapers in class to stimulate student interest. Sponsored jointly by educators and American Newspaper Publishers Association, these workshops help teachers help students become active, well-informed citizens. As a textbook for youth or the main source of information for all Americans, our country's newspapers never stop serving.

St. Raphael's Calls Meetings For Unity

All Faiths
Of Marin Invited

St. Raphael's Church in San Rafael has sent invitations to members of all churches in the county, both Protestant and Roman Catholic, to attend a Chair of Unity Octave Jan. 18 through 25.

"This is in response to a growing awareness of the need for Christian unity," Rev. John Petroni, assistant pastor at St. Raphael's explained.

The Chair of Christian Unity, which takes its name from the chair of St. Peter, was founded in 1908 by Rev. Paul James Francis of the Society of Atonement.

Although the movement is 54 years old, this is the first time the program has been held at St. Raphael's.

The response to a recent open house at St. Raphael's was very big and encouraged the decision to hold the octave, Father Petroni said.

Eight programs of prayer, each led by a priest-speaker, will be held at 8 p.m. each day of the octave. Prayer will be followed by a social hour in the school auditorium. Those attending will have an opportunity to visit and share views if they wish.

Pope John XXIII, in his Christmas message, said that the Second Vatican Ecumenical Council has resulted in "the spontaneous revelation, almost unexpected by most people, of a sense of Christian unity and brotherhood." He likened it to a bright beacon inviting all Christians from the farthest corners of the world to heed the call of Christ, "that all may be one."

This is the desire of the local observance.

Invitations have been sent to 48 ministers in Marin County, inviting them to come as observers, to enter into the prayers if they wish, or at least to pray during this time for the same intention. They also are being asked to invite their parishioners to participate in any way they see fit.

Each of the eight evenings is being dedicated to a special intention, so that Christians of all faiths are praying for the sanctification of each other as well as themselves.

The talks will not necessarily be coordinated with the special intentions.

For the various evenings the intentions are:

Jan. 18, for the unity of all Christians; Jan. 19, for the sanctification of Roman Catholics; Jan. 20, for the sanctification of the Eastern Orthodox;

Jan. 21, for the sanctification of Anglicans; Jan. 22, for the sanctification of Lutherans and Presbyterians; Jan. 23, for the sanctification of Congregationalists, Baptists and Methodists; Jan. 24, for the sanctification of all other Christians, and Jan. 25 for the conquest of the World of Christ.

Twelfth Night Pageant Due At Christ Church

A Twelfth Night pageant will be presented at the Christ Church Episcopal parish hall in Sausalito at 7:30 p.m. tomorrow.

"The Nations Shall Come To Thy Light," directed by Mrs. Fred M. Tetzlaff, will be in pantomime. All the Sunday school children will participate. Brian Rowlands will narrate.

BARTH'S DEFINITION

Faith Is A History, New Every Morning

By LOUIS CASSELS
United Press International

What is faith?

Virtually every Christian writer since the time of St. Paul has offered a definition.

Despite the multiplicity of words already said on the subject, it is a notable event when Dr. Karl Barth undertakes to spell out the meaning of faith. Barth's stature among modern theologians has been likened to that of "a giant among pygmies." Many regard him as one of the greatest Christian thinkers of all time.

In his latest book, "Evangelical Theology: An Introduction" (Holt, Rinehart & Winston, $4), Barth devotes a whole chapter to faith.

First, he rejects as false or inadequate a number of concepts of faith which are widespread today, even among theologians.

Faith, he says, is not merely a matter of giving "assent to certain propositions and doctrines" which one has encountered "second hand" in the Bible or in the teachings of the church.

Such a "blind" acceptance of external authority is a "house of cards in which no one would be well advised to take occupancy." The first strong wind of doubt or adversity may blow it down.

Nor is faith a wishful opinion, or "hypothesis" which man formulates when he arrives at "the boundary of what he considers to be certain human knowledge." If faith were no more than a brave human leap into the unknown, it would be "scarcely worth mentioning."

Finally, faith is not just a "mood or attitude" which helps man to cope courageously with the vicissitudes of life. This subjective view of faith as an end in itself, Barth notes, is one of the most popular heresies of modern Protestantism.

Having cleared away the underbrush, Barth proceeds to give his own view of faith. And it is not so much a definition as a description.

Faith is a relationship between man and God which rests upon and is validated by first-hand experience. It occurs when man finds himself confronted by God, not as a proposition but as a reality. Man responds by "affirming, trusting and obeying" the Reality which has laid hold upon him.

"No one can take such action by his own power," says Barth. "A man can only do this when he is overcome by God's word and its spirits of power."

And yet, the act of faith is always "genuinely and freely man's own." Man is sought before he seeks; the initiative is always with God. But the "event" of faith does not take place until man responds with affirmation, trust and obedience.

The response is not made once and for all. Faith is "a history, new every morning." "Faith," declares the giant of 20th century theology, "is basically a most intensive, strict and certain knowledge."

Mormons Hit Birch Backing Church Link

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah (AP)—The highest leaders of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, Mormon, said Thursday they oppose any attempt to link the church with "extremist ideologies," including the views of the John Birch Society.

"We deplore the presumption of some politicians, especially officers, coordinators and members of the John Birch Society, who undertake to align the Church or its leadership with their partisan views," said a statement issued by the first presidency of the Church.

The Power Of Prayer

Mary Wellington Gale, a member of the Christian Science Board of Lectureship, will discuss the stabilizing power of prayer in a talk at 3 p.m. tomorrow in the Masonic Temple, 1122 Magnolia Avenue, Larkspur. The program is sponsored by the First Church of Christ Scientist, Larkspur.

Racial Justice Topic

Rev. Eugene Boyle, chaplain of the Catholic Interracial Council of the Archdiocese of San Francisco, will speak on "The Layman and Interracial Justice" at a meeting at 8 p.m. Tuesday in St. Patrick's Parish Hall, Larkspur.

The Burning Of The Christmas Trees

By DON KEOWN

For Eastern Christianity, it commemorates the Baptism or rebirth of Christ.

For much of Western Christianity, it is the Day of Lights marking the Illumination of Jesus or of the Light which shone on the Jordan.

It is also the Festival of the Magi or the Twelfth Day of Christmas, marking the end of the Christmas season, but, let us hope, not the end of the Christmas spirit.

LEO THE GREAT called it the Feast of the Declaration, others the Feast of the Apparition of Christ.

Whatever its name, the Epiphany, as observed Jan. 6, is one of Christianity's oldest Holy days.

Clement of Alexandria made mention of it in 194, telling of how the Basilidians had feasted on the day of the Baptism after devoting the night which preceded it to lections of the Scriptures.

In the Antioch of 386, we are told, Epiphany and Easter were the two great religious feasts. The physical birth of Christ was not yet feasted.

If Epiphany no longer is the occasion it once was in much of the Christian world, it does not go unmarked.

Nor is it unobserved in Marin County. Many Marin churches tomorrow will mark the Epiphany in their services.

AN ADDED tradition for Jan. 6 for many churches and parishes throughout this country — particularly Episcopal churches — has become the burning of the Christmas trees and trimmings on this night of the Twelfth Day of Christmas.

Several Marin churches and communities have scheduled such rites for this weekend.

The Holy Innocents Episcopal Parish at Corte Madera has been holding such rites now for the past 12 or 14 years.

Preceding the burning of the trees and starting at 4:30 p.m. tomorrow will be a Nativity pageant and candlelight service in the church—also a tradition with the parish. The tree-burning will then take place in front of the church across from the town square in Corte Madera.

And as the trees burn, those gathered around the huge fire will sing Christmas season hymns and carols under the direction of Dr. S. Drummond Wolff, Holy Innocents minister of music.

The end of the fire and of the singing will mark the close of the Christmas season in Corte Madera.

BEHIND THE singers will be the towering lighted tree which stands in front of the church—and which is still another Corte Madera tradition.

First lighted in 1914 when it stood but five feet tall, the evergreen is reputed to be the first tree to have carried such outdoor illumination in the nation. Early bulbs dipped in paint were used in that first attempt at a lighted tree.

And predictably, the paint melted and ran as the lighted bulbs became hot.

Today that tree stands some

Several Marin Communities Schedule Traditional Epiphany Ceremonies

80 feet tall. And some 300 colored lights are required to illuminate it annually.

The tree, says Father T. W. Ewald, pastor of Holy Innocents, is still a healthy specimen and certain to preside over many more Christmas seasons and Epiphany rites.

Of the bright burning of the trees, Father Ewald says: "It is altogether appropriate as an Epiphany observance. For the day has been called the Day of Light. And it is in tribute to the Light of the World, Our Lord."

The Epiphany tradition has become a community event with some 400 persons attending annually.

The Corte Madera fire and police departments cooperate, directing traffic and providing the proper safeguards against any fire hazard.

SO INTENSE was the heat from the burning trees and trimmings that telephone cables through the vicinity were once endangered. The telephone company, however, has since provided special insulators for the cables so that they can withstand the terrific heat.

St. John's Episcopal Church of Ross, where Rev. Harold E. Hallett is the rector, is another Marin parish which traditionally conducts a tree-burning ceremony on Epiphany. The St. John's rites will be conducted tomorrow night about 8 o'clock on Ross Commons, immediately following a candlelight service in the church which will begin at 7:30.

There Ross Fire Chief A. T. Henrich will again supervise the big bonfire.

It is probably St. John's which brought the tree-burning tradition to Marin County.

Pastor Hallett, who is himself observing his 21st Epiphany at St. John's, says he believes his predecessor as rector, Rev. John C. Leffler, first brought the tradition to Ross "about 30 years ago."

"IT WAS, I believe," Father Hallett says, "an old English tradition which Reverend Leffler thought would make a beautiful addition to our own holiday observance."

Father Hallett thinks the tree-burning rites very probably have pre-Christian roots, going back to the days when the pagan peoples of Britain, tired of the short and dark winter days, greeted the return of the sun with huge bonfires.

Christ The Victor Lutheran Church of Fairfax has also scheduled a "tree burn" for tomorrow night to conclude its annual "Epiphany Festival of Song and Light." The sponsoring Christus and Victory Choirs will be heard inside the church in a program of music beginning at 7 o'clock, to be followed by a ceremony of lights and the burning of the trees on the church grounds. The Fairfax community has been invited to participate.

The Methodist Church of San Rafael is still another Marin church planning a "tree burn." Its event will be held tomorrow at 6:30 p.m. in the church parking lot at 9 Ross Valley Drive.

In Belvedere, the Twelfth Day of Christmas burning of the evergreens is a community-sponsored rather than church-sponsored event. This year's big bonfire will take place tomorrow night at 7 o'clock, again in front of the Belvedere Post Office. The Belvedere Recreation Commission, headed by David Ross, is in charge.

BOY SCOUTS of Troops 64 and 74 of Marinwood and Lucas Valley will hold a "tree burn" tonight at 7:30 at the corner of Miller Creek Road and Las Gallinas Avenue in Marinwood, under the supervision of the Marinwood Volunteer Fire Department.

The burning of the trees may be the most colorful part of the Epiphany tradition, Fathers Ewald and Hallett admit. But to them and many of their parishioners, it is not the most important part.

That, they feel, is the Epiphany blessing that is pronounced upon their communities and for all of Marin County.

CHRISTMAS TREES burn brightly as the traditional bonfire with caroling marks Epiphany and the close of the Christmas season in front of the Holy Innocents Episcopal Church in Corte Madera. Tree-burning ceremonies on Epiphany or the Twelfth Day of Christmas will be held in a number of Marin County communities tonight and tomorrow. (Photo by Ken Molina)

Jordan L. Martinelli—Marin Civic Leader

By FLORENCE DONNELLY
When the San Rafael Rotary Club recently made Judge Jordan L. Martinelli an honorary member, he was singled out because of his

"civic work, his leadership in Boy Scouts and assistance to other juveniles."

This is just a condensation of the eminent jurist's contributions to his native Marin County and the State of California.

ALTHOUGH HE retired from the Marin County Superior Court bench in September of 1960, he made it plain then that he was not relinquishing his interest in legal matters—but that he intended to devote more time to business affairs and would accept assignments to other courts without compensation.

Judge Martinelli has more time now for his Paradise Valley Ranch near Bolinas, and for his hobbies of horseback riding, fishing, hunting and gardening. He is president of the board of Marin County Financial Corp., and president of the Marin County Savings and Loan Assn. He is a past president of the Marin County Council of Boy Scouts and holder of the Silver Beaver Award, the highest award for adults serving the Boy Scouts.

Judge Martinelli was born in San Rafael in his mother's family home. The property is now part of Boyd Park. His grandfather, Lorenzo Martinelli, had come to Marin County first with Fremont's army. Lorenzo and his wife both came from the same town in Switzerland and bought ranch property in Marin.

Judge Martinelli's father, the late Ennio B. Martinelli, was born at the ranch home in Devil's Gulch, now included in Samuel P. Taylor State Park. Ennio B. Martinelli, known better as E. B. Martinelli, studied law and was a partner of Henry Greer in legal firm first located in the old Wilkins Hotel building. Later the law office was in the brick building on A Street, now occupied by the Redwood Real Estate firm.

E. B. MARTINELLI was Marin County district attorney for four years and then was a California state senator, serving Marin and Contra Costa counties from 1909 through 1911.

Judge Martinelli entered law practice with his father in 1920. He was graduated from San Rafael High School, where he was president of the student body, attended Santa Clara and a graduate of St. Ignatius College (now Jordan Martinelli was elected seven times for four-year terms as San Rafael city attorney.

He also served for 20 years as city attorney of Sausalito, Larkspur, Ross and Fairfax. He was a member of the law firm of Martinelli, Gardiner and Riede from 1934 to 1949 when he was appointed Marin County Superior Court judge by Gov. Earl Warren. He was also presiding judge of the appellate division and was judge of the Marin County Juvenile Court.

Judge Martinelli is a past president of the Native Sons of the Golden West, a past exalted ruler of San Rafael Elks Lodge and a member of Miramonte Camp, Woodmen of the World.

HE IS A past president of San Rafael Lions Club and is a member of the advisory board of the Bank of America, a former president and director of the Redwood Stations, Inc., and former president and director of Marin Petroleum Distribution Co. Judge Martinelli has been made a director of the Redwood National Bank, just beginning operations at Fourth and E streets, San Rafael.

Judge Martinelli's wife, the former Genevieve Cochran, is also a third generation Marinite.

They have two sons, Jordan L. Martinelli Jr., assistant manager and secretary of the Marin County Savings and Loan Assn., and Roderick Martinelli, an attorney with the firm of Bagshaw, Schaal and Martinelli.

Judge Martinelli's mother, his sister, Emma P. Martinelli, and his brother, Ennio Martinelli, reside in San Francisco. Another sister, Mrs. Earl McNeil, lives in Novato.

When I asked Judge Martinelli about the cases he had heard which he found the most interesting, he said one was Juneau Spruce Co. of Alaska versus the longshoremen's union for damages from a shipping strike. In this case a judgment of one million dollars was awarded the plaintiff.

Another case tried in Contra Costa County was the City of Richmond versus Parr Industrial Corp. and Parr Terminal Corp. The city sought to cancel two 75-year Parr leases of the Richmond waterfront. The leases were found to be good and the city could not cancel them.

IN AUGUST Judge Martinelli was called to Placerville to occupy the bench for the suit brought by the California-Michigan Lumber Co. against the Bechtel Corp. and Sacramento Municipal Utility District for damages resulting from the destruction of 9,000 acres of virgin timber by fire. It was alleged that the utility district and Bechtel Corp. had built a chain of reservoirs which caught fire that spread to the stands of virgin timber.

After three weeks of the hearing the case was settled out of court.

And in Marin Judge Martinelli said the most interesting case he had heard was Caryl Chessman's appeal to avoid the death penalty. The appeal was denied and Chessman died in San Quentin's gas chamber on May 20, 1960.

Driver Instruction Gets A New Look

Tamalpais District Revamps Program With The Help Of Mobile Equipment

California educators, like the general public, are divided on whether it is the job of the public schools to teach youngsters how to drive properly.

Most people, especially educators and traffic authorities, do agree that proper instruction in driving from some source is an essential.

There is even now a proposal awaiting the California Legislature, held over from the last session, to take driver education out of the schools and give it to the Department of Motor Vehicles. There have been similar proposals before. People close to the problem don't give it much chance of becoming law.

THE LAW NOW says that public high schools must give every student six weeks of "driver education." The term refers to classroom instruction.

"Driver training," which refers to behind-the-wheel instruction, is optional. But educational and safety authorities, as well as insurance people, believe that the required instruction is meaningless without practical driver training.

Like it or not, the schools have it. And most want to make the program educationally sound.

In the past several years, the Tamalpais Union High School District has done intensive revamping of the program for that purpose. The resulting new look in the driving program went into effect this year.

THE LAW requiring classroom instruction does not specify where the student time shall be found. Various districts do it various ways. Some have a semester course in driver education, sometimes filled out with other state requirements such as first aid and the effects of narcotics, tobacco and alcohol. A kind of catch-all course results.

Others take the time from an "orientation" course, from physical education, from social studies, or elsewhere.

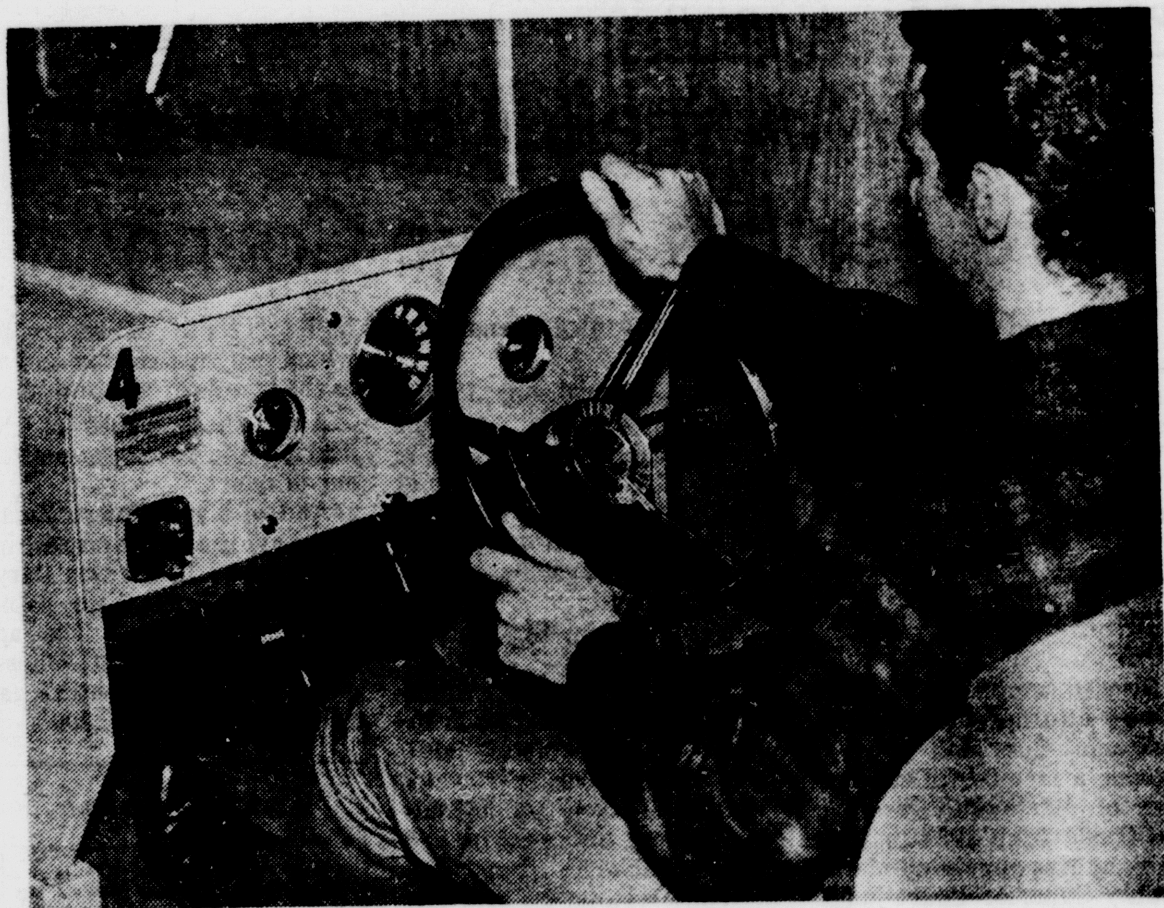

At one time in the Tam District the state-required unit was part of sophomore English, an arrangement satisfactory to few if any—students, parents, or teachers alike. Some people, in fact, were horrified.

Now the classroom instruction is given in study hall and is required of all Tam District freshmen.

The district's new look now has a team of five instructors, three training cars and a "drivotrainer" in a trailer. A drivotrainer simulates driving as the Link trainer simulates flying for the training of pilots.

THE WHOLE shebang—instructors, car and trailer unit—is mobile. It moves from Redwood to Drake to Tam for 30-day periods each semester.

The drivotrainer was the key factor in overhauling the program. It allows instructerest in the program and doubled its enrollment capacity. Here the student is Scott Meyers.

tion for twice the number of students by combining use of the three cars and the unit. Yet, because the state reimburses a district up to $42 for each student trained, the cost to the district itself is nullified by the expanded program.

Conclusions of the three-year district study which preceded inauguration of the program indicated that total cost to train 1,080 students, including teacher salaries, would be $39,000. Cost to the district would be nothing because a potential tab of $45,360, at $42 per student, would be picked up by the state, which reimburses actual costs. The estimated Tam District cost per student was $36.10, leaving a total margin of $6,367.

Supt. Chester G. Carlisle

says he recognizes that the cost, whether paid by the state or the district, is borne by taxpayers. But, he adds, as long as the job is given the schools by the state, at least funds are not drained from local revenues needed for other instruction.

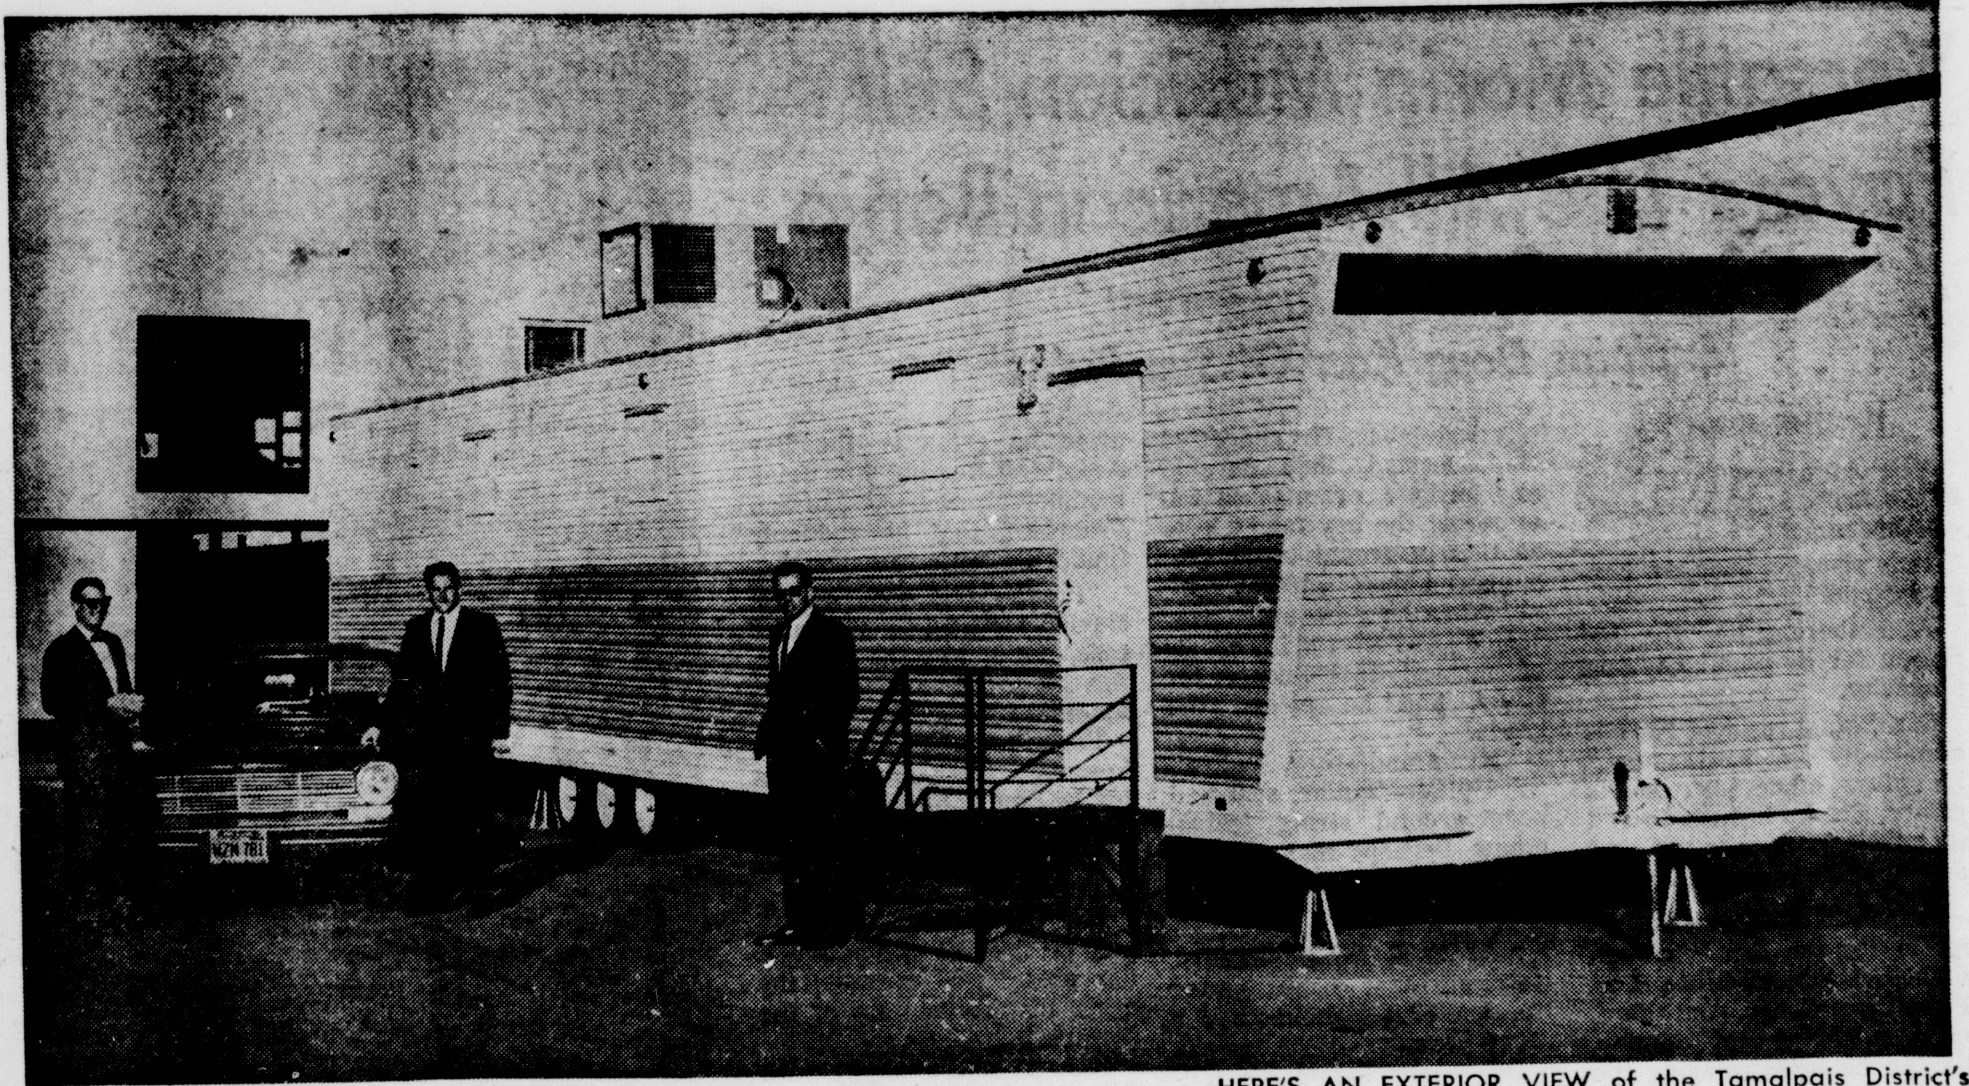

CARLISLE ALSO admits that the financial aspect is subject to enrollment proof. Enrollment at Redwood, for the first six weeks of operation, for example, was not at capacity. Then the "classroom" moved to Drake and enrollment was at capacity.

The teacher and equipment team is at work six periods a day. The teachers are scheduled for all three phases of the program—in the drivotrainer, in the cars, and in the classroom.

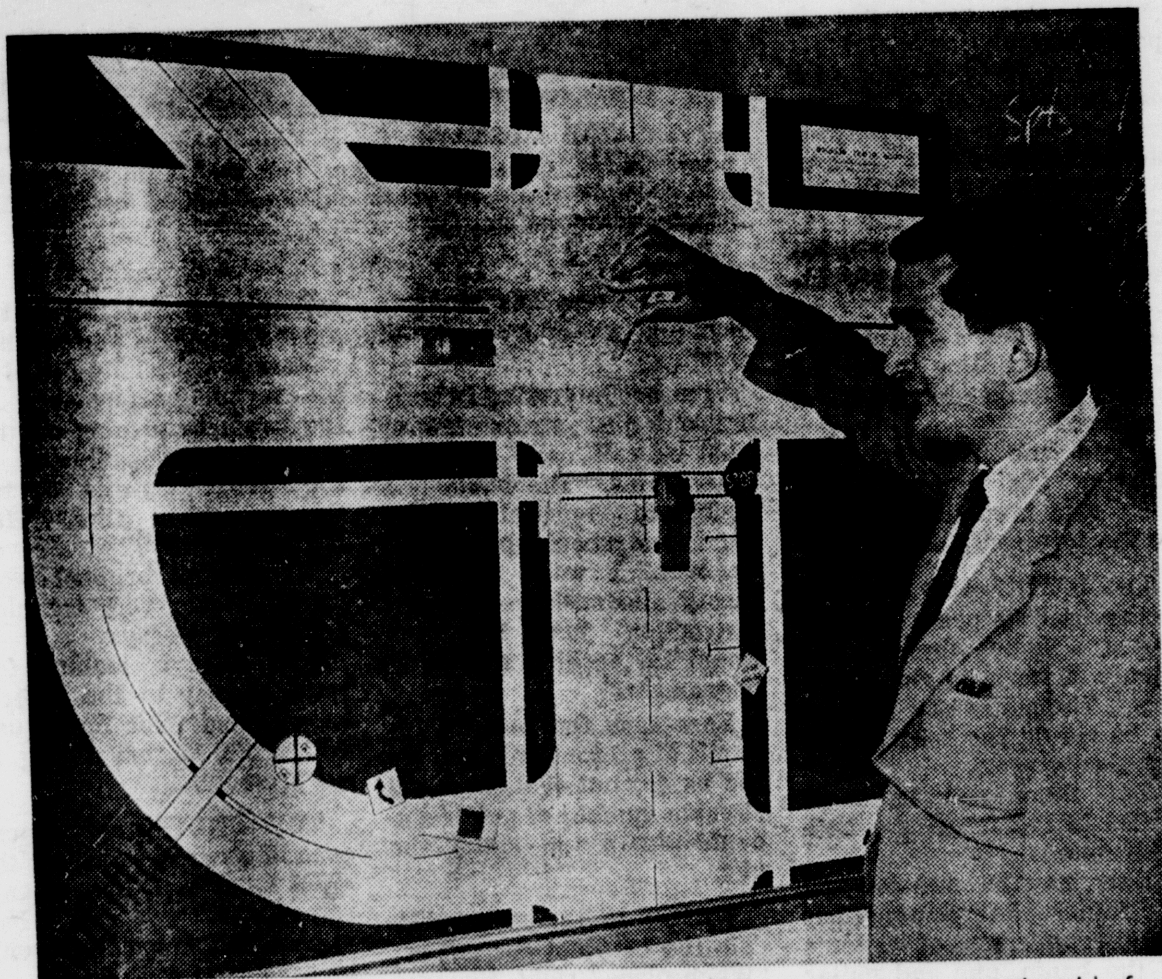

Heading the team is veteran driver training teacher Morris Shepherd. Working with him are Allan Ahlsten, Phillip M. Palen, L. Duane Smith and Maurice Weinger.

Besides traffic and safety people, strong backing for the program comes from parents of teen-age boys. That's because almost all insurance companies grant premium discounts if the boy has had driver training. And insurance rates for male drivers between 16 and 25 are extremely high.

While the insurance advantage alone is no justification for the program, Carlisle pointed out that it is an indication from "those who ought to know" that the training makes better drivers out of youngsters.

HERE'S AN EXTERIOR VIEW of the Tamalpais District's drivotrainer. The mobile equipment, which the district leases, can be moved from one Tam campus to another at regular intervals so that all three high schools can benefit from the program. Alongside the drivotrainer is one of the training cars and three of the five instructors, left to right, Morris Shepherd, L. Duane Smith and Phillip Palen.

A MAGNETIC traffic board and some toy vehicles help instructor Maurice Weinger illustrate for his students how an intersection hazard can be avoided. Such classroom driver education instruction is a state requirement and must be completed before Tam District students can move on to driver training. Devices such as the board are being used with increasing frequency as driver instruction becomes more refined.

THE TEAM OF INSTRUCTORS which serve three high schools of the Tamalpais District—Tamalpais, Redwood and Drake—is composed of these five men. Left to right are Morris Shepherd, L. Duane Smith, Maurice Weinger, Phillip Palen and Allan Ahlsten. They move, with their equipment, from school to school at 30-day intervals.

Versatile Marin Musician Still Favors The All-American Banjo

'It's A Happy Instrument,' Explains Doug Karr Of San Rafael

By DON KEOWN

The banjo, says Doug Karr, is the basic and true American instrument.

It is also, he adds, "a happy instrument."

And therein lies the big reason for its popularity and longevity.

San Rafael resident Karr is admittedly "a banjo man." He plays other instruments galore. But he hastens to add that "the banjo was my first and is still my real love."

KARR IS THE musical director for the San Francisco nightspot, Bustles & Beaus, at Powell and Geary. And there, every night except Sunday, he can be heard playing the banjo.

He gives lessons on the banjo, the ukelele and the guitar at his home at 228 D Street in San Rafael.

And he just recently signed a contract to record for Penthouse Records, the firm which recently turned out a hit for another Marinite, Dick Stewart.

Karr began playing the banjo as a boy. At 7 he was stricken with polio. The doctor advised his parents that, as a result of the illness, their son would never be able to do physical labor. He suggested that, instead, they develop any artistic or musical talents that the boy might have so that he would be able to support himself in that manner when he grew up.

Doug was offered his choice of musical instruments for study, and he picked the banjo.

"My grandfather had always played guitar, so I had been around string instruments. Perhaps that was one reason for my choice," he says.

ANYWAY, KARR studied classical tenor banjo under the late Pat Sammarco for seven years.

He recalls Sammarco telling him that "while the banjo is being pretty much ignored now, every instrument has its cycle. And the banjo is too fine an instrument to be overlooked very long. It will be back on top."

Later he played on radio and the vaudeville stage for Roy Smeck who told him the same thing: That the banjo would soon be on the upswing as an instrument.

Karr did not confine his musical studies to the banjo, however. He learned the guitar. And he began studying clarinet and saxophone, majoring in the former when he attended music college in New York.

Still later he took up the bass violin.

"But I never forgot the banjo or gave it up," he says.

During World War II Karr was a flight engineer aboard a B-29, flying 35 missions in Europe.

AFTER THE war, he resumed his music. But it was after he came to the Bay Area, transferring his union membership to Local 6 of San Francisco, that he suddenly found his banjo in demand.

"Previously I had always carried my banjo along in its case, but it was the clarinet, the sax or the bass fiddle that I wound up playing."

For the last five years, however, Karr, represented by the Fun Unlimited Agency, has had difficulty keeping up with the demand for his banjo talents.

"Except for the lessons I give on the uke and guitar, it has pretty well crowded the other instruments out of the picture."

Karr is not unhappy with that situation.

Why this resurgence in popularity of the banjo?

Well, says Karr, part of it can be attributed to the natural cycle of popularity in musical instruments, such as was predicted by Sammarco and Smeck.

The folk singing boom has been a blessing to both the banjo and the guitar.

Art Mooney's "Four-Leaf Clover" recording gave the banjo a tremendous shot in the arm.

"And the Gay 90s and Roaring 20s nightclub bits have also brought the banjo to the forefront," Karr says.

THE BANJO cycle may have just passed its peak, Karr believes, although there is still plenty of work for the instrument. The guitar now appears to be riding the crest of the popularity cycle.

But there will be more cycles in the future for both instruments.

Karr, now 39, married and the father of three sons, has a full complement of students of the banjo, uke and guitar for the time available from his other work. He teaches both classical and popular music as well as jazz guitar.

One thing he stresses to his banjo pupils, who come from all the age groups: "If you're not serious about it, if you want to learn 'just for the fun of it,' don't waste your time or money."

Karr demands a dedicated approach from his students including an hour a day of practice.

"I'm not interested in turning out just strummers or what we call 'daisy pickers,'" he explains. "The banjo is a legitimate musical instrument, and should be treated as such. I work harmony, theory and such in with my instruction just like you would in teaching any other instrument."

Karr says the bulk of his pupils at present are studying the banjo, but that he has a sizeable number of guitar students plus a few taking the uke.

WHICH IS the more difficult, the banjo or the guitar? "When played right, they are about the same. Both are difficult," he says.

As for the ukelele, Karr says it is the easiest to learn of the three instruments—"it is more of a for-fun instrument." But it has value as a means of determining whether or not a person has a talent for string instruments, he adds.

And it is especially helpful in developing technique for a person handicapped by small hands.

There are, Karr points out, three types of banjos: The five-stringer which came from the Old South where the plantation slaves first played it; the long-necked plecktrum banjo so prominent in the 1920 flapper era, and the tenor banjo which is the instrument Karr plays and teaches.

Karr is especially proud of his recent performance on the banjo in turning out the musical accompaniment to the Pacific Gas and Electric Co. promotion film, "How High Is the Sky?"

"It was all original score by Bill Davis, very technical and great," he says.

And Karr is looking forward eagerly to the records he will make for Penthouse, with Pete Moroni acting as his promoter.

"MY ONLY other experience in recording was for the MGM label back East when I recorded for two and a half years with Carson Robinson," he says.

Karr is now in his third year at Bustles & Beaus. Banjo playing, six nights a week, plus teaching, recording, etc., during the daytime hours might sound like too much of a good thing. But not to Karr.

"It is the versatility of the instrument that is the secret of its appeal. Classical banjo is vastly different from the popular stuff of the 1920s or the old Dixie melodies.

"But all kinds of banjo music have one thing in common—the more you hear of it, the more you like it. And the more you want to hear."

"That is why more and more people have been taking up the banjo. They have been given added opportunities to hear banjo music. And it's catching."

"What Is Meant By 'Invisible' Stains?"

So-called "invisible" stains are those that are not apparent until a garment or fabric is drycleaned. A number of everyday-used household items, such as perfume, hair spray and cold wave solutions are causes of these stains. Usually, the stains only show up when the fabric is subjected to drycleaning, drying or the heat of pressing. However, sometimes, simply storing a garment in a hot area for a few weeks or months may bring the "invisible" stain into sight.

Whenever something is spilled on a garment or fabric, whether or not a stain appears, send the article to your professional drycleaner at once. Delay or storage may cause irreparable damage. Pin a note on it explaining what was spilled so that special attention can be given to prevent permanent damage.

The heart-breaking thing about "invisible" stains, is that they do not remain invisible unless they are removed promptly.

Radio KTIM's Wanderer

Colorful Don Bennett Can Recall Adventurous Past

By KARL BARRON

You can never quite tell where the fable leaves off and where Don Bennett begins.

For over a year "The Wanderer" has amused and sometimes puzzled listeners to radio station KTIM. Three mornings a week, Bennett wanders into the studio, lugging his briefcase (a battered canvas airlight bag) and a China spittoon filled with numbered poker chips.

On the air, he rambles on about incredible adventures, his own and others', mountain climbing, treasure hunting, all obviously fabricated from a wild imagination. Until you challenge him and he hauls out an even more battered scrapbook, with clippings. In his 70 years, Bennett "has been everywhere and done everything," and don't doubt it, for he'll make a liar of you.

TAKE THE ONE about "raising a mountain." In 1935 Bennett was operating a small radio station in Alamosa, Colo. The height of nearby Mt. Blanca in the Sangre de Cristo Range had long been a local bone of contention.

A government survey by F. V. Hayden in 1861 had placed the peak's elevation at 14,413 feet, making it the highest in Colorado. Hayden listed Mt. Massive as next highest at 14,092.

However, later surveys supposedly discredited Hayden's calculations, and when our hero entered the scene, Blanca had been relegated to fourth place, scaling in at 14,363. Bennett wanted to raise it to its former glory—with perhaps a little of that glory rubbing off on Bennett.

All this argument about a few hundred feet may seem silly, until one checks and discovers that there are 45 peaks in Colorado topping 14,000 feet, with Mt. Elbert now listed in Encyclopedia Britannica as the highest at 14,431.

So Bennett formed the Blanca Mountaineers, dedicated to "adding a few feet every year!" The mountaineers built a 10 foot rock pile (14,373), and on top of this erected a 30 foot pole with a parabolic reflector to enable a new government survey. (14,403—see how easy it is?)

Bennett climbed the mountain 13 times and climaxed the job with a network radio broadcast, credited with being the highest land-based broadcast that had ever been done. Since there was no short wave equipment, 12 miles of farmer's fences were used as phone lines, with the party stringing wire to the top after the fences ended.

JUBILANT AT his success, Bennett decided to come down the fast way—the "snow side," straddling a stick for a brake. The stick broke, and says Bennett, "I rubbed hell out of my tailbone."

"Getting home where cameramen and reporters were waiting for the story, I put some medicine on the injured part. But in my haste grabbed capsicum vaseline, which contains something like red pepper. As I told the story on the air, I howled and yelled until I fainted dead away!"

In 1939 Bennett once more attacked Mt. Blanca, returning from Hollywood in a try to erect a higher pole. Icy high velocity winds kept him from raising the final section of the pole, but he came down this time with a reading of 14,475 feet. This would have put Mt. Blanca second only to Mt. Whitney (14,495) in the U.S.

Bennett said this reading, on a sealed instrument he believed to be accurate, was made without adding the rock pile or the pole.

No sooner had Bennett come off the mountain for a second time than he was deep in another promotion. This one, he frankly admitted to reporters, would not only prove his point, but would "provide Bennett with a car-load of potatoes!"

HE AND PAUL Flemons of Alamosa drove a 1931 Model A Ford roadster over Mosca Pass, a shortcut from Pueblo to the San Luis Valley. The pass was a shortcut for horse and rider, and Bennett wanted to prove that a road only three miles long, built

THEN THE PRESIDENT of the Mt. Blanca Mountaineers, Don Bennett led this mass climb up the slopes and cliffs of through it, would cut 40 miles from the existing route.

"On the way up to the top of the pass," he recalls, "I ran through a cattle guard, cut my face on the windshield glass and broke an arm."

With this for a starter, they drove, pushed, hoisted and bridged the Model A over the pass. It took 33 hours to make the four mile trip, and in places a block and tackle had to be used to drop the car over or haul it up cliffs.

The car ran all the way, Bennett reported happily. A local reporter wrote: "Don said he was going to sell his old car to the junk dealer

Mt. Blanca. From atop the peak, an Easter sunrise service was broadcast by radio. Farm fencing served as the necessary telephone line.

now since he came over Mosca Pass, but from the looks of it that's where he got it."

A more sober-minded editor pointed out "had Bennett and Flemons consulted with state highway engineers . . . they could have scanned reports made in 1927, giving accurately the distances to the points in question as computed by engineers of skill and experience." He then went on to say that Bennett's figures as to mileage saved were all wet.

Snorted Bennett, his arm in a sling: "If adventurers consulted engineers before each adventure, there would not be any adventurers!"

The Wanderer's adventures have included searching for lost gold mines, trading in and operating gold mines — very recently, hunting buried treasure, racing cars, yachting, fishing, and "exploring anything that was interesting."

An Adventurer At Heart

That's Don Bennett, Better Known As 'The Wanderer' To KTIM Fans

went to Texas, then New England, where he was the Yankee Network's Uncle Don with a trained canary bird named Mickey.

Uncle Don and Mickey pulled more fan mail than Chandu the Magician, and if you're old enough to remember Chandu, you know what a feat that was.

Bennett claims to have done the first "re-created baseball game" at an Arkansas station he operated, getting the play by play by telegrams.

He did another stint as Uncle Don in Long Beach, but during an earthquake a cup of hot coffee spilled in his lap. The mike was hot too, and Don joined the legion of kiddie broadcasters who said a nasty word on mike. They fired him.

For a year he was a pitchman in front of all the Fox West Coast theaters, demonstrating a home recording device. However, this came to an end in Denver where a Major Bowes amateur unit was playing. It seems Bennett was drawing a bigger crowd outside than the amateurs inside, and the irascible major had him removed.

Bennett now lives on what he calls the "bayside" of Corte Madera in a rambling ranch house loaded with souvenirs and relics—"not the least of which is me," he says.

HIS WIFE Marjorie, much younger than the Wanderer, is one of the few female credit managers in San Francisco, where she has been employed for more than 20 years.

In the past few years, Bennett has not adventured as much as in the past, but Monday, Wednesday and Friday mornings at 9:15, and again in the evening at 9, Wednesday and Friday, KTIM listeners have a chance to vicariously step into the past of the Wanderer, and relive his exploits.

COLLEGE OF MARIN music department head John H. Myers directs his Community Band in practice on the Kentfield campus. The band is part of the college's very active night music program, and it has enjoyed a marked success in a number of appearances before Marin music lovers. (Photos by Lou Caillat)

THOROUGHLY SLEEPED in the rich British choral music tradition is Dr. S. Drummond Wolff, who commands perfection from his College of Marin Community Chorus. He is also a member of the college's daytime music faculty.

HIS HANDS are a blur as John H. Myers leads his College of Marin Community Orchestra through an exciting passage during one of the weekly night rehearsals. The orchestra performs standard symphonic compositions.

A BLACKBOARD aids Byron Jones, teacher and performer, as he discusses scale structure with the members of his music appreciation class in the College of Marin's night-time music program. It has been a popular course at the college for a number of years.

Hundreds Of Marinites Involved In College Night Music Program

Persons Of All Ages And Occupations Take Part In The Seven Courses

Webster's dictionary defines "serenade" as "music that is sung or played at night." This definition is quite appropriate to describe the night music activities currently taking place at College of Marin in Kentfield.

In just two years, under the guidance of John H. Myers, the college's night music program has grown to include seven music courses which actively involve nearly 300 people.

In contrast to the college's extensive day music program, which is designed to meet the needs and interests of the regular college students, the night program is planned to appeal to general community musical interests. As a result, persons of all ages, from high school students to grandparents, are to be found in the night music classes singing, playing an instrument, or studying about music.

THE VERY nature of ensemble music is such that individuals with varying degrees of musical skill can participate side by side. The more experienced lead the way, while those with less experience learn from their example.

The end result is that a large number of people cooperate in making music.

Many an older person finds the college's ensembles to be a good place in which to regain a performing skill of former years which may have gotten a bit rusty from disuse. Myers says that one of the real rewards for the ensemble director is to see a person take up an instrument or begin to sing again after a lapse of years, and in a short time "be fiddling along with the best of them."

A large number of young people also are active in the night music courses. Some of the college's own students augment their musical experience in the night music classes, and several of Marin's high schools are represented in the ensembles.

HIGH SCHOOL students participate with the knowledge and permission of their school music instructors who are pleased to see these students gain additional ensemble experience.

A majority of the persons who play and sing at the college in the evening hours are amateurs. It is, however, a tribute to the quality of College of Marin's night music program that a number of very advanced musicians, and even some former professional musicians, are regular members of the ensembles.

An examination of the membership lists of the night ensembles reveals that these are truly community activities with individuals from all walks of life and from all parts of the county from Novato to Sausalito. There are even some who commute from San Francisco and the East Bay, and claim to have found no comparable type of musical activity in their own areas.

Because of this all-embracing community aspect of its program, the college has chosen to call its performing ensembles the College of Marin Community Band, Community Chorus, and Community Orchestra.

THE INSTRUCTORS are the backbone of an ambitious music program like that at College of Marin, and great pains have been taken to assemble a staff of outstanding musicians and teachers.

Leadership of the performing ensembles is shared between two men.

John H. Myers, who is head of the college's music department and is responsible for the organization of both the day and evening programs, directs the band and orchestra. Myers is a conductor of considerable experience, and he has developed the band and orchestra into excellent musical ensembles. Each of these instrumental organizations gives two concerts every school year, and past concerts have met with considerable success. This year's band numbers well over 50 members. The orchestra, which performs standard symphonic literature, is a bit smaller than the band. But Myers comments that each year the orchestra keeps getting bigger and better.

This year's orchestra is the best ever, he adds, but, as in most amateur orchestras, the appearance of more string players would be a welcome event.

DR. S. DRUMMOND WOLFF, also a member of the day faculty, directs the Community Chorus. This group has shown remarkable growth since its founding two years ago, and now numbers more than 100 singers.

Doctor Wolff came to College of Marin from England by way of Bermuda and Canada, where he was a member of the music faculty at the University of Toronto. He is a fine organist and choir master, and the composer of a large quantity of published choral music.

The Community Chorus centers its activities around the performance of major choral works not usually undertaken by amateur choruses, and frequently augments its performances with professional soloists and full orchestral accompaniment.

Two classes are taught by Byron Jones who is supervisor of vocal music for the San Rafael schools, choir director

THE ART OF PLAYING the recorder is demonstrated by Leo Christiansen for his Tuesday night class at the college. The instrument, a dominant woodwind in the 16th and 17th centuries, has enjoyed a resurgence of popularity in recent years. And Christiansen is widely known as an authority and performer on the instrument, sometimes known as "the block flute."

"KEEP THE VOICE placement forward" Byron Jones seems to be saying as he leads his night school voice class through an exercise at the College of Marin. This class was started a year ago and has proven to be so popular that it may soon have to be broken into two divisions to accommodate all the interested students.

literature and playing of the recorder, and does a remarkable job with the college's classes. Started only a year and a half ago, Leo's classes have turned out to be some of the most successful ones in the night music program.

It is a wooden instrument with a flute-like tone, in fact, sometimes called a "block flute," and was actually the main woodwind instrument of the 16th and 17th centuries. A wealth of fine recorder music exists from those times.

The playing of the recorder has enjoyed quite a revival in recent years for several reasons. It is a relatively inexpensive instrument. A beginner can acquire a basic playing skill in a reasonably short period of time, and a large quantity of fine music for this instrument is readily available.

Leo Christiansen, an excellent musician in every respect, is an authority on the literature and playing of the recorder, and does a remarkable job with the college's classes. Started only a year and a half ago, Leo's classes have turned out to be some of the most successful ones in the night music program.

THE PRESENT night music program at College of Marin is regarded as only a beginning.

Myers states that the music department is always ready to add additional courses whenever a clear community interest becomes apparent. He welcomes inquiries and expressions of interest about the program.

All music classes will be starting the year's second semester during the week of Feb. 4, and new class members are invited to join at that time.

I watched the sea one morn
Just outside my cottage door.
On wings of foam the waves were borne
To wash the sandy shore.

The sun's rays tiptoed across the bay
And touched Posidion's lips,
While choppy crests of salt and spray
Awakened the sleeping ships.

The little boats near shore
Creaked and groaned in the breeze,
Like Spanish galleons riding o'er
A thousand storm-tossed seas.

Business Boring? Not To This Writer

Harper and Row, 182 pages,
$4.50. Reviewed by Bryce W.
Anderson.

John Brooks is a New Yorker who has the "New Yorker" writing style down to perfection. The accounts that make up "The Fate of the Edsel and Other Business Adventures" first appeared in that magazine.

The first 78 pages of this highly readable volume are taken up with a clinical description of the rise and fall of the Edsel, the Ford Motor Co.'s greatest flop. The remaining pieces deal with other adventures of the business world, all different, all fascinating.

This reviewer's favorite is "A Corner in Piggly Wiggly," which recounts the fall of Clarence Saunders "Sole Owner of My Name"), who invented the supermarket but was himself sold on the Street.

If you think finance is dull and business boring, take a trip with John Brooks through this rather slim volume. You will discover how wrong you were.

OUR REVIEWERS REPORT

A Prize Novel

THE SAND PEBBLES by Richard McKenna, Harper and Row, 579 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Richard Lytle.

This weighty novel is many things—a political treatise on what went wrong in China, a probing analysis of naval life that has both humorous and tragic overtones, a slice of vital history—but primarily it is a fast-moving and exciting adventure.

It is Richard McKenna's first novel and it displays a fine talent for developing character and a fresh approach to story telling.

McKenna's hero, Jake Holman is a strong character who takes a grip on life and tries to control it. His own struggle to reach understanding with the Chinese is in sharp contrast with the official and often misdirected stands taken by the treaty governments in China.

Jake's position is hopeless from the start. He is only one member of the crew on a very small U. S. naval gunboat in Hunan province. He is a "sand pebble," the nickname for crewmen from the gunboat San Pedro.

The finest quality in the book is the characterization of Jake and his fellow crewmen. The men are vital and alive; they make the story move with suspense and realism.

Debussy's Story

CLAIR DE LUNE by Pierre LaMure, Random House, 468 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Barbara Hosmer.

Commemorating the 100th anniversary of the birth of Claude Debussy, French composer Pierre LaMure has written a lively popular novel based on the life of the composer. Not the least of its attractions is the late 19th Century Parisian landscape which forms its setting.

LaMure, author of the successful "Moulin Rouge," is most vivid in the scenes of Debussy's early life, when uncaring parents allowed the child to be reared by his dotting young Aunt Tavie. Her early death left the young Claude penniless and still unwelcome at home, where hungry mouths and bills took all there was. He narrowly escaped his father's crude attempts to exploit his obvious musical talents as "the new boy genius" in the manner of Mozart by joining the entourage of a Russian noblewoman who engaged musicians to play her beloved Tchaikowsky.

Then to the Conservatoire in Paris, where Claude became the musical rebel he was to remain throughout his life span.

The remainder is a readable, if increasingly indistinct, account of his musical and amorous fortunes and misfortunes, creating suitable storyline for a popular film—one can visualize rich scenes of the wildly handsome composer penning romantic passages while rain drops fall through gaps in the garret roof—and leaving the nature of the composer himself and his special contribution to musical form somewhat hazy.

This American Heritage Junior Library edition carries an impressive collection of photographs and paintings. The text is brief, facile and well organized. Ample use of clear maps further adds to the value of the book.

The importance of telling of the biggest single undertaking of World War II can not be stressed too much. This book does justice to the men involved, and, at the same time, keeps well clear of glorifying warfare.

A Close Look At TV

By DON KEOWN

THE HUNGRY EYE by Eugene Paul, Ballantine Books, 283 pages, paperback, 75 cents.

"The Hungry Eye" by show business veteran Eugene Paul deals, not with a San Francisco nightclub, but with the television industry.

It is a loosely-written, loosely-edited and poorly-proofread paperback original. But, nevertheless, it is a most interesting book.

In his wordy fashion, Paul offers you a behind-the-scenes look at how television shows are born, financed, sold and produced. What strikes you most is the fantastic waste involved—the ridiculously high profits and salaries, the padded payrolls and costs, the total disregard for practical economics.

Interesting, too, is the insight Paul provides on the personalities of some of television's top figures—both executives and entertainers. You might be surprised to find out just what some of your favorites are like while working—off camera.

You may not always agree with Paul on his assessments of TV shows past and present—we didn't—but his comments in this regard are nevertheless interesting and worthy of consideration. It is the most exhaustive and probing investigation of TV we have yet encountered.

GIDEON'S RIDE by J. J. Marric, Harper & Row, 209 pages, $3.50.

OUR RECOMMENDED mystery for the week is J. J. Marric's "Gideon's Ride," another in the excellent Inspector George Gideon series.

This time Gideon and his colleagues at Scotland Yard are involved primarily in the solution of some nasty bits of violence aboard London's transit vehicles. And as always, Marric succeeds in working in a number of other cases, some related some unrelated, as he gives you a convincing and most interesting documentary-type picture of British police at work.

TECHNIQUE FOR TREACHERY by Seldon Truss, Crime Club, 179 pages, $3.50.

ANOTHER very good mystery, also with a London setting, is Seldon Truss' just-published "Technique For Treachery."

Truss prefers to focus his attention upon one set of related crimes—this time a treasonable act which triggers murder.

Superintendent Gidleigh is his primary sleuth, and the very delightful Mr. Horace, crime reporter for the London Snapshot, is very much present.

Like Marric, Truss is a proven old pro who spins a well-plotted and well-told detective yarn.

The Stereo Scene: Four-Track Tapes Make The Grade

By JOHN SUNIER
Editor, FM & Cultural Guide

While their first appearance on the market alienated many stereo fans due to the variable quality of the tapes, four-track stereo on tape has now reached a high level of acceptance.

This is due partly to the greatly-improved quality control in dubbing from the original master tapes, and also to the improved and expanded library of music from most major record labels which is now available on tape.

On "Twin-Pak" sets (containing the equivalent of two complete lp records), the cost is often the same or cheaper than records, and the sound is nearly always superior, together with longer uninterrupted playing time.

BACH: The Complete Mass in B Minor, Alarie/Merriman/Simoneau/Neidlinger/Vienna State Opera, Orchestra and Academy Chorus with Herman Scherchen conducting—

Westminster four-track stereotape WTZ 119.

This work is perhaps the greatest piece of liturgical music ever written, and a classic on either disc or tape. Scherchen has fashioned a superb musical structure with skill and loving care.

The music is uppermost on this two-reel tape set, with no intrusions of record scratch, rumble or distortions to spoil the heavenly mood. The soloists are especially well spotlighted via stereo depth.

This belongs in every classical tape library.

THE MODERN JAZZ QUARTET: Pyramide and One Never Knows—Atlantic four-track stereotape ALP 1904.

This "Twin-Pak" contains the popular MJQ film score composed by pianist-leader John Lewis for the movie "No Sun in Venice," together with their more recent collection of a half-dozen chamber-jazz gems, including John's beautiful "Django."

An hour and one-quarter of the very best in small-group intimate jazz, and the sound is much superior to either one of the stereo disc versions.

Man Of The House Deserves Place He Can Call His Own

They say a man's home is his castle — but every man should have a castle in his home.

Ask any guy and he'll tell you that a private den, be it ever so humble, rates No. 1 on the list of things he most wants—next to a million greenbacks.

In many homes, providing a den is within the realm of possibility.

A NICHE in the basement, a corner of the attic, a remodeled storeroom or that guest bedroom—perhaps even half the double garage could be given over to this noble cause. Heat and ventilation of out-of-the-way corners does pose a problem, but can be licked with efficient wall units.

Size can be tiny — just enough for a desk and some book shelving, the TV set and a couch long enough to allow the head of the household to stretch out full length while snoozing and viewing Sunday afternoon football.

To make best use of small space, all furnishings can be built in, even the couch. The desk goes across the narrow end wall, leaving an adequate knee hole with storage cupboards on either side under the writing counter.

Book shelving can go above the desk, reaching to the ceiling. The best arrangement is to set one section of shelves against the end wall in one corner, and another section in the opposite corner above the desk, but against the long wall. This leaves plenty of depth for the writing counter in the center. Shelving need be only eight inches deep.

THERE ARE pencil-slim couches on the market, but if you don't find one suitable, then build it in. This runs with the length of the room, against the long, outside wall. If this wall has windows, it can be built to fit underneath. A simple frame covered with one or two upholstered foam rubber cushions is all that's needed. The wall can be the back rest, with more foam cushions placed against it.

Lighting and telephone for the desk are wall-hung in the space between the two bookcase sections.

All built-ins can be easily executed with Douglas fir lumber. One-inch fir will be needed for cabinetwork and shelving.

If at all possible, panel the den to endow it with the traditional masculine touch. However, for a small room, use a light but warm beigetoned wood such as fir. Its straight graining provides lots of character without introducing a busy pattern, and the wood is handsome finished clear or with a natural stain.

A wipe-off paint finish in grey or white might also be a good choice for the paneling, particularly if the built-ins are to be painted.

Hot Water Is Essential—So Take Care Of Heater

You can't get along without hot water. Therefore, take care of the source—the water heater.

The temperature dial setting of an automatic water heater should normally be at or below 140 degrees. Set it higher, though, for periods of peak use—combined operation of dishwasher and clothes washer, for instance, while baths are being taken.

But consistent operation above 140 degrees means excessive wear on the water heater.

The burner of a gas-fired water heater is easily accessible and should be checked periodically to keep it clear of dust or sediment.

If your water heater is the storage type, drain a few quarts of water out of the bottom of the tank several times each year to keep sediment from accumulating in the tank bottom.

A final note here on hot water—you can keep your water bills low by tempering all hot water as it is used.

... Before You Plant That Rose

First Study Advice From Nurseryman

As the new year gets under way, so too, does the rosarian's calendar of activities.

For January is not only the month of pruning old roses, but the busiest month for planting new ones.

Before rushing out and buying the first roses you see advertised, however, read the following advice from the California Assn. of Nurserymen about selecting and planting bareroot rose bushes. It is easy to do the wrong thing in this respect, but just as easy to be right, so why take a chance?

THE MOST important step comes in the selection of healthy bareroot stock. It's not really hard to tell the good from the bad. Basically you want to determine if the prospective purchase seems well formed with at least three strong and plump canes. Beware the shriveled-looking rose bush or that with weak-looking canes. It is not enough to have one good cane if the others are less than that.

Roses are graded No. 1, No. 1½ and No. 2, with No. 1 being the best. No. 2 grade is discarded by most reputable rose growers. Both No. 1 and 1½ grades should give very good results. The thing to watch out for is the "bargain" rose... especially if it is sold without a variety name and just referred to as "pink," "yellow," etc.

Another thing to remember about rose buying is that the new All-America Rose winners Tropicana and Royal Highness this year are hard to get. These are the roses everybody wants and supply usually doesn't meet the demand, so buy yours early.

There are dozens of yesterday's favorites, however, and novice rosarians will certainly want to look at some of these. Your rose garden wouldn't be complete without such old favorites as Peace, Queen Elizabeth, Chrysler Imperial, Sutter's Gold, Tiffany and others.

NOW FOR THE planting of those new roses you bring home bareroot from the nursery:

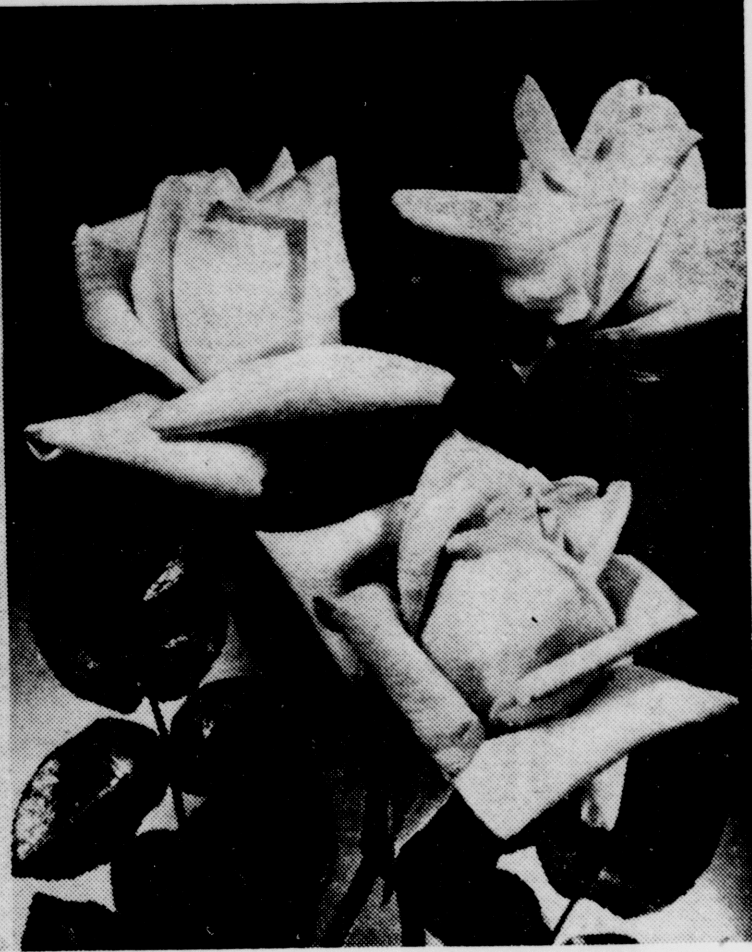

The following nurserymen's association recommendations are precise, but easily followed through to completion. The first and most im-

Plant Togetherness

Grouping your house plants together not only enhances their decorative and display value, but also contributes importantly to their healthy growth indoors. Plants in groups of red clay pots keep cooler and tend to resist overheated modern homes better by generating their own humidity.

THE TWO NEW All-America roses for 1963 are beauties—the Tropicana hybrid tea, left, and the Royal Highness hybrid tea, right. But you may also find them in short supply at the nurseries. The Tropicana is a lush orange-red, producing a fountain of color and fragrance. The foliage is generous and remarkably disease-resistant. Steadfast in color, its large blooms last up to two weeks. The Royal Highness is a stunning clear shell pink with a frost-like coating. The five to five-and-a-half-inch bloom is of exhibition quality. (Photos by California Assn. of Nurserymen) portant step is to choose a proper site, and we assume you've already done this. The perfect rose garden should have sun for at least half the day and more is preferable. It should be well drained and the soil should be of about neutral reaction—neither too acid nor too alkaline.

The planting hole should be large enough to permit you to spread the roots of your rose out. They should never be merely crammed into a hole in the ground.

If the soil is on the lean side, you will be wise to mix it with some planting mix and/or compost before putting it back into the hole. Then mound the soil up in the shape of a cone and spread the roots so that they settle over this mound.

Now look at the base of your rose—the area where the canes branch out from the shank. This is known as the bud union and it should be used as a guide to determine how deep to plant the rose bush. In our warmer climate, the bud union should be kept slightly above the final soil level—about one inch above.

WHEN THE LEVEL has been determined, fill in around the roots with the soil you have taken from the hole and mixed with manure or not, as the case may be. When the hole is completely full, firm the soil in with your feet. You want to make sure that the soil packs firmly about the roots, leaving no air pockets.

Then using your hands, or a trowel, make a basin around the bush. If the bud union has been lowered during the planting, scrape the soil away from it while you are making this basin. This hole becomes your irrigation basin and it should be filled with water immediately, both to settle soil and to keep the roots moist.

And that's all there is to it. Some rosarians like to mound soil up over the bud union temporarily to keep it from drying out, but others ignore this practice.

Flowering trees and shrubs are prima donnas of the spring garden. Such beauties as the saucer magnolia, forsythia, flowering quince, flowering crabapple and dogwood are the true symbols of spring and should be planted by all Marin gardeners who wish to emphasize the change of seasons. These are all available for planting now during the bareroot season.

Dwarf fruit trees provide the ideal answer for growing fruit in limited spaces. The dwarfs are half the size of normal fruit trees, but they produce heavy crops and the fruit is of standard size. Another solution for small home gardens is the combination fruit trees—single trees onto which have been budded two or three varieties of fruit. A typical combination tree might bear plums, peaches, and nectarines on the same rootstock, or three different cherry varieties. These trees are of normal size, but the saving in space is obvious when you consider the variety of fruit which one tree can bear.

January is the best month to prune rose bushes. The thing to remember is that roses bloom on new wood and that a good percentage of last year's growth should be cut out. Another thing to keep in mind is that heavily pruned bushes will bear fewer but larger roses than lightly pruned bushes. You have to choose between quantity and quality, which is really not a difficult choice to make.

The first gladiolus are ready for planting. For continuous bloom from these colorful flowers, make a succession of plantings—at two week or one month intervals—from now to June.

Many gardeners hesitate to pick camellia blooms because of some old wife's tale that they are better left unpicked. The California Assn. of Nurserymen says that camellias actually benefit from a light pruning to keep them compact and that one of the best methods of pruning is to pick the blossoms with a bit of stem attached. Young plants are better left alone, but well established camellias making good growth each year can stand a fair amount of pruning-picking.

Winter is the best time to move most shrubs and trees. If you have one or another that's been in the wrong spot, take shovel in hand and start digging around the roots. Most shrubs will stand bare rooting this time of year, but they are really better when you can take a sizeable root ball with them.

Lawns are never at their best during winter months, but they should be kept mowed and fertilized regularly. The California Assn. of Nurserymen suggests treading lightly on them, however, following a rainstorm. Constant tramping during wet weather will only compact the soil and make it less manageable during the rest of the year.

A CHECKLIST FOR GARDENERS OF MARIN

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

✓ Plant perennials now for bloom in spring and summer. Delphinium, primroses, coral bells, candytuft, columbine and Shasta daisy are but a few of the many available.

✓ Plant bareroot roses this month and start pruning old roses.

✓ Be sure to keep Christmas gift plants watered. An occasional airing on the back porch or by an open window will benefit most of them also.

✓ Plant artichokes, asparagus and several other vegetables from divisions or from seedling flats this month.

✓ Make your first planting of gladiolus as soon as they show up in nurseries. Some are already on the market.

Mrs. Buckner's Hilltop Home

For two and a half years now Mrs. Simon Bolivar Buckner, the widow of the late general, has lived in the redwood home she had built high up in Sausalito to meet her specific needs.

She has been, she says, "happy in every way" with the house.

A considerable measure of her satisfaction can be attributed to the spectacular view which she enjoys from every room of her home, oriented toward the east. Below her are the Sausalito boat harbor, Richardson Bay, Angel Island and the skyline across the bay.

But much credit must also go to architects Campbell & Wong & Associates, who designed the home to her complete approval.

The home was built upon property Mrs. Buckner had acquired earlier while still residing in San Francisco. The property slopes to the east, so that the garage and the private garden were located on the west side of the house.

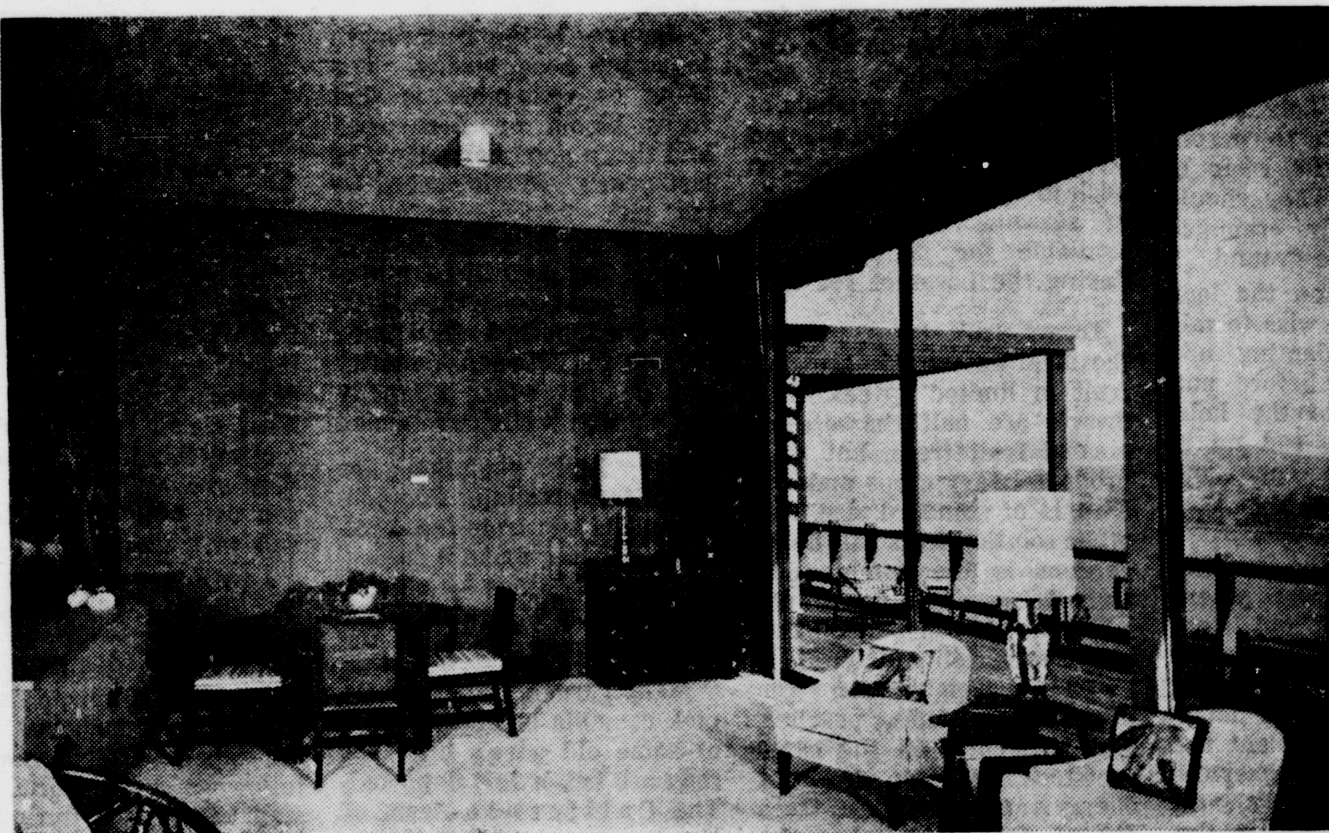

The house, according to the architects, was planned especially to meet the needs of "a single lady who has established a reputation as a lecturer and photographer."

The house contains a living room with dining area open to it, kitchen, two bedrooms, two baths, a large workroom, numerous storage areas, two-car garage and a dumbwaiter from the garage to the living floor.

THE ENTRANCE to the house is through the garden. The double front doors are painted a contrasting color so as to be a focal point from this area. The interior entry is separated from the dining area by a low built-in storage cabinet, which supports a beautiful antique set of Japanese panels. Thus the view is still not apparent.

From the entry the living room is on the right with sliding doors to the entrance garden and also to a large deck which extends across the

A Redwood Home High In Sausalito

From the left of the entry is a hall which takes one into the kitchen and master bedroom suite (both of which have views to the east). The master bedroom contains a dressing area, as well as a complete bath for the owner. The hall continues on to the other bedroom, bath and work room as well as to a stair which leads up to the garage, one story above the main living floor.

THE HOUSE is sheathed in rough redwood boards stained a warm beige color, with the trim and fascias painted a dark rich green contrasting color.

The house demonstrates the success of a close client and architect relationship.

"Realty Ramblings"

During a rainy spell, Mrs. J. called to cancel an appointment we had to look at a house she was considering buying. In view of the generally miserable weather she preferred to postpone our date, going on to say that she thought the house would look better to her on a sunny day anyway.

I disagreed, and explained to her that while it may seem paradoxical, actually the best season to look at a house is the worst.

There are many less desirable features of a house that more vividly come to light on a dark dismal day, and during a barren season. Shrubbery and foliage tend to conceal too-close neighbors and unsightly views, as they add charm and grace to a less encouraging setting. The best all around appraisal of a house should come in between seasons, because it's got to be good for you to like it at its bleakest.

In addition, of course, it's a well known fact that during the so-called seller's season properties are selling rapidly in a high market, crowded with house hunters. But, during off seasons, sellers become more realistic about values; the more barren appearance of the house is revealing; and, a more satisfactory transaction is bound to result for the buyer as well as the seller, who in most cases must turn around and buy a house in the same market.

If you don't entirely agree, why not drop in and discuss it some more with me.

SO YOU think your television screen is overflowing with cowboys? Make room for some more. The four hom-bres above are, left to right, Larry Ward, Chad Everett, Jack Elam and Michael Greene who portray a U.S. marshal and his deputies in the new "The Dakotas" series which bows in Monday at 7:30 p.m. on KGO. And, at left, the old "Wagon Train" starts rolling all over again tomorrow with Ward Bond, right, and Robert Horton leading the way, as KGO begins carrying a series of repeats of that western series on Sundays at 5 p.m. This is in addition to the new "Wagon Train" shows being seen on Channel 7 on Wednesdays.
